Whites Join Tribute To Donor of Heart

(See also Page 3)

CAPE TOWN (UPI)—The biggest funeral crowd in Cape Town history, a racially mixed throng of 6,000 including many whites, paid an emotional tribute today to the mulatto factory worker who gave his heart to a white dentist might live.

The surging crowd, so big police used dogs at one point to restore order, cheered and applauded as Dr. Christiaan Barnard arrived in 90-degree summertime heat at the funeral of 24-year-old Clive Haupt.

Women, some weeping, pushed forward to touch the pioneering surgeon. He appeared embarrassed.

Thousands of Cape Town's colored (mixed blood) population, en route to annual Mardi Gras-style carnival celebrations paused for a minute of silent tribute to Haupt, who died of a stroke at a beach a few hours before the transplant operation.

Groups of people stood silently along the three-mile route from the church to segregated Woltemade Cemetery where Haupt was buried. More than 2,000 persons gathered at the graveside and for a time hampered pallbearers from bringing the body for burial.

A minister called for volunteers to carry the casket and Mayor, Gerald Ferry stepped forward with friends of Haupt. The largely colored crowd murmured approval.

Dr. Barnard, Mayor Ferry and members of Haupt's family tossed rose petals on the coffin as it was lowered into the grave.

Haupt's widow, Dorothy, broke down, sobbing, "Clive! Clive!"

The crowd was so dense it backed up traffic for a mile in every direction and police finally brought in dogs. No one was hurt but screams swept the crowd as people fled the dogs.

BLAIBERG 'CHEERFUL'

Negro Man Next?

CAPE TOWN (AP)—Dr. Philip Blaiberg was reported in satisfactory condition and cheerful today after his heart-transplant operation.

On the fifth day with his new heart, the 58-year-old dentist is "enjoying life better now than before the operation," Dr. Christiaan N. Barnard said. "Even if he only lives for days, he's had that."

"We've given him something."

The head of the South African operating team said he now wants to do a heart transplant on a Negro.

Barnard told a press conference he now wants to perform an operation on a colored man suffering from a disease that affects only the heart and leaves the rest of the body free of complications usually found in whites. Blacks are segregated in white-ruled South Africa.

This progressive disease, cardiac myopathy, is mostly found in Negroes and is responsible for a high percentage of their heart fatalities, he said.

Siamese Twins Separated By South African Doctors

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters)—Surgeons at the Transvaal Memorial Hospital for Children in this South African city today successfully separated Siamese twins joined at the head, a hospital spokesman announced.

The white twins, Catherine and Shirley O'Hare, were born in October by caesarian delivery.

The hospital superintendent said the twins were in satisfactory condition, but still on the danger list.

The operation, performed by a 27-man surgical team, lasted five hours.

"The twins stood the surgical procedure well," the statement said.

The twins were born two weeks premature Oct. 6, to Joyce O'Hare, 23. The father is a Johannesburg businessman.

The success of the operation could be another first for South Africa's surgical teams, who in the last month performed two heart-transplant operations.

Two previous attempts to separate Siamese twins joined at the head were only partially successful. In each case one of the twins died shortly after.

When Catherine and Shirley were born, they were fed through tubes for eight days.

Medical sources said the twins shared scalp, underlying tissue and possibly part of the skull.

They were otherwise normal, the hospital said, and weighed about 5½ pounds at birth.

Officer, Bandit Wounded

VANCOUVER (CP)—A young bandit lay semi-conscious in Vancouver General Hospital today, a few yards away from a police constable who was gunned down in a dramatic shoot-out Friday.

Police said they expected to charge the 26-year-old gunman with attempted murder of Constable Stanley Blackstock, 37, and robbery of the Vancouver City Savings and Credit Union.

Hospital officials described both men as being in fair condition.

Traffic Patrolman Blackstock received a bullet wound to the chest. The gunman was shot four times.

Hospital officials said Blackstock was in surgery for two hours while doctors located and removed a bullet from his right lung.

Doctors performed a tracheotomy on the gunman so he could breathe while he was receiving emergency treatment. A medical team spent five hours with him in the operating room during which time they found four bullet wounds but no bullets.

SUFFERED MANY WOUNDS

Surgeons repaired a severed artery in the bandit's right shoulder and wired his jaw, which also was hit. Other wounds were to the right thigh and right hand.

An armed man entered the credit union Friday afternoon and demanded money while he held a shiny revolver at a customer, three Credit Union employees and a private detective.

"That's right, it's the second time in two months," the armed man told Detective Dick Best, hired by the company after two previous holdups.

The gunman got $1,675 in small bills, then fled, with Detective Best and another credit union employee in pursuit.

Driving his car, Best overtook the bandit, who was on foot. Best was forced to give up the chase when the gunman began shooting. The man left in an old-model car.

Const. Blackstock, who happened to be patrolling the area, followed the bandit's car and cornered it at a dead-end street. The bandit's car skidded to a halt, then reversed and crashed into the constable's car.

TOOK DEAD AIM

An eye-witness, Mrs. H. E. C. Deane-Freeman, said that as the bandit got out of his car, he pointed his gun at the policeman's chest. They were eight feet apart.

The policeman was shot as he got out of the car. Then the constable began to fire. Although hit four times by police bullets, the young bandit scrambled a steep hill, fell over a fence, got up and hobbled up a nearby lane into hiding.

The constable staggered back to his patrol car and radioed for assistance and an ambulance. After eluding police for about 20 minutes, the gunman lurched from his hiding spot and fell on a lawn, almost at the feet of searching policemen.

Name of the wounded gunman was withheld. A credit union official later said that the bandit who got the $1,675 Friday was the same one who had held up the office twice in the previous two months.

At police headquarters, the first news that Blackstock had been shot came when the officer asked for an emergency ambulance. "Is the suspect wounded?" the dispatcher asked.

"I'm shot," said Blackstock. "Please get an ambulance here right away. The suspect got away."

CHINH

Anti-U.S. General On 'Leave'

SAIGON (AP)—An anti-American general who commands the division rated the least capable South Vietnamese unit in the war has been ordered to take an extended sick leave, military sources reported today.

A reliable senior military source said the general probably would not return to his command.

Brig-General Pham Truong Chinh, who has been quoted as saying his 25th Division "is probably the worst division anywhere in the world," is to begin the sick leave Jan. 15, sources said.

Chinh was not known to be ill and recently completed a division-wide inspection tour. He went by road rather than request a U.S. Army helicopter.

WIRE BRIEFS

Fire Loss $100,000

MOOSE JAW (CP)—A restaurant was destroyed, four businesses damaged and 20 persons evacuated from four apartments in a fire late Friday that caused damage estimated at more than $100,000. No one was injured.

Three Shot Dead

BOSTON (AP)—A young woman and two men were found shot to death today in a parked station wagon in the Roxbury section and police believe the triple slaying was the work of a lone gunman.

FAMED DOCTOR INDICTED FOR ANTI-DRAFT EFFORTS

'No Quails About Going to Jail'

BOSTON (AP)—Dr. Benjamin Spock, Yale university chaplain William Sloane Coffin Jr., and three other opponents of U.S. policy in Vietnam, have been indicted on charges of conspiring to counsel young men to avoid the U.S. military draft.

"I have no quails about going to jail," Spock, the 64-year-old author of numerous books on baby care, said at a press conference in his New York City apartment after a federal grand jury returned the indictments in Boston Friday.

"This trial will better dramatize the illegal and immoral war and if this trial will further my efforts to stop it, so much the better," Spock said.

Also indicted with Spock and the New Haven, Conn., chaplain were Marcus Raskin, 33, of Washington, D.C., co-director of the Institute for Policy Studies; Mitchell Goodman, 44, an author from New York City, and Michael Ferber, 23, of Boston, a graduate student at Harvard University.

Raskin was a White House aide for a time in the Kennedy administration in the office of McGeorge Bundy, special assistant to the president for national security affairs.

Vietnam Gas Claim Probed

OTTAWA (CP)—The director of Canada's medical aid program in Vietnam may be asked for an official report on his allegations that the U.S. has used lethal gas in the war.

A spokesman in the external affairs department said today the statements by Dr. Alje Vennema, 35, contained in a letter to a Montana professor of zoology, will be studied by External Affairs Minister Martin.

Although Dr. Vennema had not made the allegations in his official capacity, Mr. Martin would have to decide whether they concern the position of the Canadian government, the spokesman said.

Dr. Vennema is a Dutch-born physician who lived in Burlington, Ont., before he went to Indochina independently three years ago. Later he took over a tuberculosis out-patient clinic 350 miles north of Saigon in Vietnam and began receiving supplies and other support from the Canadian external aid office.

Last summer he was named to head the Canadian medical effort in South Vietnam.

Dr. Vennema wrote Dr. E. W. Pfeiffer of the University of Montana that some Vietnamese civilians have died from the effects of gas being used by U.S. troops.

CLAIMS GASES KILLED

The letter is quoted as saying "some of the gases used in the field not only can cripple and kill but actually have done so." The mortality rate is stated as 90 per cent among children and 10 per cent among adults stricken by the gas.

The U.S. defense department has denied the allegations.

Science reporter William Hines reported the letter in the Washington Star without identifying Dr. Vennema. The Montana professor later identified Dr. Vennema as the doctor who wrote him.

The external affairs spokesman here said Dr. Vennema has been under no obligation to report—and has not in fact reported—medical findings to the Canadian government during his three years in the country.

Two Killed In Road Crash

BURNABY (CP)—Two teenagers were killed and five other persons sent to hospital in a two-car collision in North Burnaby today.

Dead are Earl Gordon Harvey, 18, and Joseph Vales Telle, 17, both of Burnaby.

The victims were in a car that carried four other young people, including two 14-year-old girls. The other four were not critically injured.

The driver of the second car also was taken to hospital.

ROUGH GREETING was experienced by U.S. vice-president Hubert Humphrey on visit today at palace of Ethiopian Emperor Haile Selassie in Addis Ababa. Cheetah bared its fangs and snarled when Humphrey attempted to pet it. University students hanged President Johnson in effigy and chanted anti-American slogans while waiting in vain for the U.S. leader to address them. Vatican Envoy Contacts Hanoi

(Times News Services)

A Vatican envoy has had direct contact with a representative of North Vietnam about a peace appeal by Pope Paul, says the Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano.

It is believed to be the first time the Vatican disclosed a direct diplomatic contact with a North Vietnamese representative.

The councillor of the papal nunciature in Paris, Msgr. Antonio Innocenti, personally handed to the North Vietnamese representative there, Mai Van Bo, the text of the Pope's appeal of Dec. 15 for a worldwide Day of Peace Jan. 1, the paper says.

It does not say whether the meeting took place before or after Pope Paul's offer Dec. 22 to mediate in the Vietnam dispute and his meeting with President Johnson Dec. 23.

Meanwhile South Vietnam's President Nguyen Van Thieu said today "everyone is waiting for a much clearer position from Hanoi."

But he added that the bombing of North Vietnam could not be stopped without reciprocal action from Hanoi.

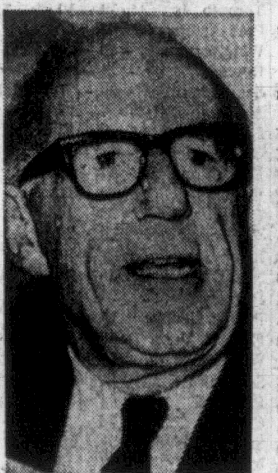

Death Row Hunger Strike

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP)—Nearly half the condemned men on San Quentin prison's death row went on a hunger strike Friday, protesting the food and water.

Associate Warden James W. D. Park said 25 of the 63 men started the strike at breakfast and then turned down their last meal of the day, served at 2 p.m.

However, they won one of their points. Parks said the convict waiters wore clean aprons serving the afternoon meal.

Park said the meals sent to death row travel a long way from the prison kitchen and efforts will be made to keep the food warmer.

DR. SPOCK

... questioned by FBI

The FBI said the five would be ordered to appear in federal court at Boston for arraignment. That date has not been set.

Conviction of conspiracy to violate the Selective Service Act carries a maximum penalty up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

La-Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of the selective service system, said he takes "no pleasure in seeing anybody get indicted," but said the action, initiated by the justice department, was necessary because "if they are not guilty they ought to get a chance to show it and if they are, they ought to be punished."

The indictments listed 11 overt acts as a basis for the charges allegedly having taken place during four events.

Actions Overtake Indignant Denials

By JOHN MIKA

It's funny how much time is spent by our provincial government and its friends in issuing indignant denials these days.

Bank of B.C. in a little difficulty? Not so, good news is just around the corner snorts Harold B. Elworthy, its acting president.

In a political pickle because of financial embarrassments? Never, cries Premier Bennett himself.

Going to make this the last term in office? Never, cries Mr. Bennett again.

Looking for a return of the prodigal role? No, no, says William Clancey.

It's the last denial that is the most interesting—and most illuminating because actions seem to deny the denial.

Who is William Clancey? He is a "Sacred shadowman". A genial, cherubic artist of public relations whom nobody hates—in a world of bitter enemies.

He also is political perspicacity personified who once was an ardent Liberal but foresaw the collapse of the tottering Coalition government in 1952 so he found himself a new client—W. A. C. Bennett.

Ever since, he has been the premier's chief "image maker". The advance drum beater for every election campaign, the one who arranged the "spontaneous" whistling and the "country's on fire" for Social Credit.

Huge election rallies, bond bonfires, successful Sacred Strawberry Socials—all were the work of Bill Clancey.

He not only organized the programs and the crowds but even the applause, circulating personally through the audience to start clapping—vigorously whenever the sheep began to yawn over Mr. Bennett's sometimes incomprehensible speeches.

Besides being one of his small squad of expert backroom boys, Bill Clancey also became just about the most-trusted of Mr. Bennett's trouble shooters.

He helped arrange the now-famous clandestine meeting between Mr. Bennett and President John F. Kennedy in Seattle which led to re-writing of the Columbia River Treaty. He smoothed the way for Mr. Bennett's forays into Wall Street.

A measure of Mr. Bennett's trust was his resigned acceptance of the Bank of B.C.'s subscription drive failures when even the vaunted Mr. Clancey couldn't pull the chestnuts out of the fire at the last minute.

Every politician has a "drummer" but few are as skilled or as sensitive as Mr. Clancey. No wonder he became closer to Mr. Bennett than almost any man alive. After all, much of the premier's record-breaking tenure of office was his handiwork.

Bill Clancey never fell for his own baloney and he almost always collected on his private election bets.

So it's not without significance that he almost worried himself sick in the 1966 provincial campaign when all other Sacred were expecting a landslide in their favor.

And it's not without significance that, after all these years, he is "considering" taking on as a client an unemployed aspirant for the federal Liberal leadership.

And it's not without significance that he has taken on the job of promoting a "non-partisan" $50-a-plate dinner for the month to introduce to influential British Columbians a new politician—national Tory leader Robert Stanfield (whom Mr. Bennett despises).

However, only he, or Mr. Bennett, could say whether the significance of these things is that the premier is in dire trouble or finishing his political career.

But both, of course, only answer with indignant denials.

Victoria Tories must be agog over the real dog-fight that has broken out for their federal nomination. And it must bring qualms to even the staunchest Liberals that the Tories are so eager.

Hardly had Rev. Walter McLean announced he would battle Eric Charman for the Conservative nomination than both were busy, particularly on the University of Victoria campus, signing up members and seeking their support at the nomination convention later this month.

Then, Mr. Charman sent out a flood of luncheon reception invitations at the Imperial Inn today. So Rev. McLean (he's dropped the Rev. in the hope, apparently, that it won't remind the Tories they dumped Mr. Charman in 1965 for an unknown minister and lost the election) followed suit.

He's sent out invitations for a reception in prominent local Tory George Jones' home.

And then there's Ald. Clyde Savage on the trail too.

It certainly seems the Tories smell blood in this riding and perhaps are rushing things because of rumors the Liberal MP David Gross might even resign, creating a byelection possibility.

Speaking of by-elections, don't be surprised if there were not just one but three in the provincial field this spring—each in ridings held by a different party.

Mr. Bennett must call a byelection by June for Vancouver South as a result of last year's death of Sacred MLA Tom Bate and he's heard the rumors that an NDP member may have to quit due to ill health in another mainland riding.

So I've no doubt that he's also heard the rumors that Mr. Justice A. E. Lord of the B.C. court of appeal is expected to retire in a couple of months or so and the indications are that Alan Macfarlane, a lawyer since 1945 and Liberal MLA since 1960 for Oak Bay, is the man expected to be elevated to the bench.

Of course, it's just possible that Mr. Bennett started the rumor. He's never forgiven Mr. Macfarlane for licking the Sacred's determined efforts in 1960, 1963 and 1966 to seat a party member in the riding in which the premier lives.

But I, the rumors do prove well-founded, then it could be that Alan Cox stepped out of civic life last week as reeve of Oak Bay just in time to make a bid in the provincial arena.

MORAL SUPPORT

Spock said of the accusations: "We gave young men moral and financial support to end this illegal war and commit acts of civil disobedience because we are so absolutely convinced that this war is illegal and immoral."

Spock said he hopes that "100,000, 200,000 or even 500,000 young Americans either refuse to be drafted or to obey orders if in military service."

He said he was questioned by FBI agents about a month ago in connection with his protest activities.

"I told them what I had been doing," he said, "and I told them in great detail."

"But when I started to tell them why I was doing it, they stopped writing."

Goodman, at his New York home, said: "It looks like President Johnson is getting a little bit panicky."

"We're not a conspiracy. We haven't done anything undercover. We've taken ads in newspapers and literally put our draft cards on the table."

He Gave Up Quiet Life In Search for Peace

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. Benjamin Spock's book, Baby and Child Care, ranks with the can opener and coffee pot as a must in many North American households.

In annual sales it ranks close to the Bible.

Babies who were brought up according to the book when it was first published in paperback in 1946 have since grown, married and started their own families with Dr. Spock as their guide.

The book's common sense, straightforward advice, written in homesy prose, has guided and comforted millions of anxious women through the days of young motherhood.

But Spock, indicted with four other persons Friday on a federal charge of conspiring to counsel young men to violate draft laws, is a noted opponent of the Vietnam war as well as a physician. And some of his readers have lately turned away.

RETURNS BOOK

A Syracuse, N.Y., mother sent Spock her copy of the book not long ago with a note that explained she believed her son would "grow to a healthier mental and physical adulthood with the help of a pediatrician whose character I can respect."

From sales of his book, steady at about 1,000,000 copies annually, he receives about $30,000 a year. That along with his income from magazine articles could permit him to retire to the retreat in the Virgin Islands he once pictured for himself.

But he does not. In the last five years his activity in the peace movement had steadily grown until the sight of his broad-shouldered six-foot-four frame has become familiar at marches, demonstrations and rallies.

On the basis of his upbringing he seems an unlikely candidate to lead a peace march. Descended from a pre-revolutionary Hudson Valley Dutch family, Spock was born May 2, 1903, in New Haven, Conn. He grew up in a family of six children and early hewed to the conservative views of his father who was general counsel to the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad.

He attended prep school and went to Yale where he pulled a strong oar on the university's winning Olympic crew of 1924. His first exposure to liberal and radical ideas came from classmates at Columbia University's college of physicians and surgeons.

CHANGE OF THOUGHT

Gradually his ideas began to change and to his family's chagrin he voted for Alfred E. Smith in 1928. He has been a Democrat since.

He gave up private practice when the book appeared and began teaching. His first public political gesture came in 1956 when he headed a committee of physicians and scientists supporting Adlai Stevenson for president.

His involvement with the peace movement goes back to 1962 when President Kennedy announced his decision to resume nuclear testing in the atmosphere. Spock joined the National Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy.

He is emphatic about not being a pacifist. At a press conference Friday night after his

Great Bells of Cathedral Ring Out Consecration

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Church Editor

In a ceremony rich in splendor and tradition, Canon John Timothy Frame of Burns Lake today became the Bishop of the Yukon—a vast and snowy diocese covering more than 200,000 square miles.

The great bells of Christ Church Cathedral pealed out over the city as Archbishop Harold Sexton of British Columbia performed the age-old rite of consecration in the presence of Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. George Pearkes, and a congregation of more than 1,000.

Bishops and clergy from many parts of B.C. and the Yukon, with Bishop Ivol Curtis of Olympia, Washington, witnessed the stately ceremony.

A stocky, black-bearded figure, 36-year-old Bishop Frame is believed to be the youngest Anglican bishop in Canada. He succeeds Bishop Henry H. Marsh, 68, who retired as Bishop of the Yukon last November.

A native of Toronto, Bishop Frame went to Burns Lake in 1951 and has since been responsible for a parish covering 12,000 square miles.

The high altar of the cathedral glowed with color as the bishops in their white and scarlet robes formed a semicircle round the Archbishop's chair and laid their hands on the head of the bishop-elect.

According to custom, Bishop Frame knelt beside the altar rail in plain purple cassock and did not put on any of his robes of office until after he had taken the oath of obedience from Hugh Henderson, chancellor of the diocese.

After the laying on of hands, the archbishop presented Bishop Frame with the Bible. Then followed the delivery of the pastoral staff and the investiture with the pectoral cross and the ring, the archbishop saying:

"Let this staff be sign to thee of the authority of the Great Shepherd and Bishop of Souls in Whose Name and by Whose Grace thou wilt tend the flock committed to thy care."

The solemn service opened with a stately procession around the cathedral, led by the Crucifer during which the Litany was sung by the cathedral choir, augmented by those of St. Mary's, Oak Bay and St. Barnabas.

"The clergy then took their places in the nave, on both sides of the main aisle, while the archbishop performed the office of holy communion, and the bishop-elect was escorted to the chancel steps.

The sermon was given by Canon D. W. Hambridge, rector of Fort St. John, B.C., who said Bishop Frame had been called to high office in a northerly and adventurous realm.

Dedicated... Every Team Member of World Calibre

By DAVID J. PAINE
CAPE TOWN (AP) — South Africa's announcement Dec. 3 that its doctors had performed the world's first human heart transplant surprised millions in other countries.

How it was asked, could a small country such as South Africa have beaten larger, medically-advanced nations such as the United States in carrying out this feat.

The answer lies largely in years of research by specialists working as a team, the dedication and skill of the individual specialists and the high standard of all sections of the team.

All the doctors openly admit that in other parts of the world there are specialists who are at least as proficient as they. But they doubt that any other hospital has a team with the same all-round excellence.

A-1 ALL AROUND

"One must say that our surgeons, anaesthetists, physicians, theatre nurses, ward nurses and the others who make up the team are all first class," said pathologist Dr. Martinus C. Botha, one of the key figures.

"Of course, there may be as good, conceivably even better, in other parts of the world. But in Cape Town, every member of the team is of world class."

Even Dr. Christiaan Barnard, brilliant heart surgeon who leads the team, says he is not the only one who could do the job.

"There are other surgeons in my team who could perform the operation," he said.

He is not competent to do the operation alone, he said, and relies heavily on the other specialist members of the group for advice.

The team has had many years working together on heart research, and later on open-heart operations, which now are almost an everyday affair at Groote Schuur Hospital.

STUDIED ABROAD

Both Barnard and his younger surgeon brother, Marius, have studied heart operations and research in the United States and the team members have visited many countries, including the Soviet Union, to keep abreast of world progress in the heart field.

Pathologist Botha, who heads the blood-grouping laboratory at the nearby University of Cape Town's medical school, believes "without fear of contradiction that our (South African) blood transfusion services and societies are without parallel in the world."

The contribution of blood donors over the last 10 years was a major factor in the high standard of open-heart surgery in Cape Town—about 1,000 operations and not a single patient lost—culminated in the two heart transplants, he said.

It was decided from the outset of the open-heart surgery, Botha said, that fresh blood in heart-lung machines would have a great advantage over stored or banked blood suitable for ordinary transfusions.

Local donors are prepared to give blood at such times as holidays and weekends, which are often considered inconvenient in other countries, he said.

PAD RESEARCH

Not only the surgeons, but other members of the team, are so dedicated that after their normal work, they put in long hours, unpaid, studying heart problems, experiments and reports from abroad.

All consider it far more than just another job. When the first heart transplant on Louis Washkansky began in the early hours of Sunday morning, Dec. 3, several of those watching in the operating theatre but not actually taking part in the operation hurried from a party.

The Cape Town evening newspaper Cape Argus said: "It is obvious that members of the team, with all the publicity they have had, could command large fees in private practice. Here in South Africa and elsewhere in the world where medical fees can be very high... what keeps them at work on salaries at Groote Schuur is devotion to their calling."

CLEAR $700 MONTHLY

Barnard at a press conference avoided a question on how much he and other doctors on the transplant team are paid. But a local magazine reported that he earns "barely 500 rands ($700) a month after deductions" and that this amount includes "special allowances on grounds of merit."

All members of the team are considered by Groote Schuur as full-time salaried employees.

They may not accept any additional money for their services. Many also do research and, in some cases, lecture at the University of Cape Town. But so close are the ties between the hospital and the university—the latter pays 49 per cent of the salaries in these cases—that their work is virtually a joint venture divided into surgery on one side and research and teaching on the other.

The budget for Groote Schuur in 1968 is 8,000,000 rands ($1,200,000) and the costs of the heart surgery will come out of this.

Dr. J. A. Hendriks, director of hospital services in Cape Province, said it is "virtually impossible" to calculate the cost of the heart transplant operations. "They are part and parcel of the over-all service," he said.

"There is no breakdown of their cost on such."

No patients' fees are charged apart from the usual hospital fee, which are assessed on the patients' income, Hendriks said. "In other words, if a man can afford to pay nothing, then he pays nothing, but he gets the same service."

LEADER of the South African heart transplant team, Dr. Christian Barnard, watches at his Cape Town home as his wife sews adjustments on valves to be used in heart surgery. Bowl near his hand contains valves she has already worked on. (AP Wirephoto)

Until Needed For Transplants

BABOONS TO STORE HEARTS?

CAPE TOWN (Reuters)—Dr. Christian Barnard, South African heart transplant surgeon, said today it may be possible to keep human hearts alive inside baboons until the hearts are needed for transplanting to humans.

Dr. Barnard, who led a team of surgeons in two heart-transplant operations, told reporters it might be possible to store human hearts in baboons for several days.

The baboon's circulation would keep the heart alive before transplanting it to another human, he said.

The storage time would also give the heart a chance to recover from any damage suffered before the death of the donor.

"This procedure would be a great advantage in cases where it is not advisable to transplant to humans immediately," Barnard said.

It would be necessary to give the baboon a heavy dose of radiation. It would live for several days and a heart-lung machine would have to be used to infuse human blood into the animal.

Operations switching kidneys from one dog to another and then to a third had been successful, Barnard said.

University Not Sad As Defector Leaves

EDMONTON (CP)—A Soviet nuclear physicist who defected to Canada in October while working under a research grant at the University of Alberta is finding difficulty obtaining a position in other universities.

While university officials admitted his work "has been most beneficial," Dr. Boris Dotsenko said Friday he will have to seek a position elsewhere when his grant expires at the end of March.

The 41-year-old physicist, former head of the nuclear laboratory at Kiev State University, came to the university in November, 1966, under a graduate exchange program. His defection ended the program.

Dr. J. T. Sample, head of the University of Alberta's physics department, said Friday it was too extreme to suggest Dr. Dotsenko had been "pressured" out of his job in a bid to resurrect DOTSENKO... but where?

"There is no case here for special privileges, Dr. Dotsenko was not expected in the first place and he was not best suited for the exchange."

Dr. Dotsenko said he felt "said" he had to leave the university.

"The whole research collective has been put in an unpleasant situation and it would be better for me if I were to discharge this situation," he said.

"People have got angry with me because the exchange program was broken and I don't want to make any trouble in the collective that I am working in."

Dr. Dotsenko said he has applied to Soviet authorities to obtain a divorce from his wife, Klavdia, who is still living in Kiev with his 10-year-old daughter Irina.

Dr. Dotsenko is a nuclear theorist engaged in research to describe the inner structure of atomic nuclei.

Dr. Sample said, "Dr. Dotsenko has done some good work here and it will be published shortly."

"His presence has been most beneficial to the department."

Computer May Link Hospitals

A computer network linking all local hospitals, and possibly tied in also with Vancouver hospitals, is a dream of the future here.

"It is several years away, but every hospital should be prepared for it," said Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director of Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Both Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's Hospital officials are studying the use of computers which could create a vast electronic storehouse of information which could be made available at the touch of a button.

It could instantly compare the treatment of a patient with a specific illness with treatments afforded in other hospitals in North America.

Tied in with a screening laboratory it could yield almost instant results for testing procedures making admission to hospital for test unnecessary.

Dr. Pickles said development of the scheme would mean his hospital would hire a computer expert to set up the process.

January Events In Oak Bay

The Oak Bay Recreation Commission has announced a series of evening activities for January.

The schedule for the month:

Jan. 8—table tennis at Willows School, 7:30 to 10 p.m.; badminton at Oak Bay Junior High gymnasium, 8 to 10 p.m.;
Jan. 9—volley ball, Oak Bay
Senior High, 8 to 10 p.m.; Jan.
10—Girls' grass hockey, Oak Bay Junior High, 8:30 to 9:30 p.m.; Jan. 11—badminton, Oak Bay Junior High, 8 to 10 p.m.; Jan. 16—Women's outdoor recreation education tour of Bastion Square, 1:30 p.m.;
bridge at Monterey School, 7:45 to 10:45 p.m.; Jan. 19—Senior Citizens, Henderson Hall, 1 to 4:15 p.m.

the program as implied by a Toronto newspaper.

He admitted however that Dr. Dotsenko's leaving is "appropriate" in that several people on the campus were disappointed over termination of the exchange program and they felt it might be revived on Dr. Dotsenko's departure.

VAGUE REPLIES

Dr. Dotsenko said he has applied for positions in several Canadian universities but had received only negative or indefinite replies.

The University of Alberta said positions in its physics department have been filled for the next year.

Dr. Sample said if Dr. Dotsenko is unable to find a job until March he may remain at the university on a month-to-month basis.

Dr. Walter Johns, the university's president, said:

"He has decided to stay in this country, but that does not mean he is going to stay on the campus—we are not responsible for him."

Science and the Have-Nots

SO MUCH IS HEARD IN ADVANCED and relatively wealthy countries like Canada about the technological revolution that it is salutary to be reminded that for the majority of the people of the world the marvels of science translated into useful artifacts mean nothing. As Dr. Roger Revelle, director of Harvard's Centre for Population Studies, phrased it, "the fruits of present-day technology are little more than sour grapes to the world's underdeveloped lands."

There are a number of bitter ironies in the situation. One is that so much scientific and technological skill is spent on things like clever packaging, low-calorie beer and push-button telephones, which are hardly relevant to the improvement of living. Another, Dr. Revelle noted in a speech last week at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Improvement of Science, is that some of the greatest advances have been in military hardware, sophisticated weaponry, which is "nothing less than a curse to the poor countries who feel they must spend their vital subsistence to acquire them," out of fear that they will be defenseless against rapacious neighbors.

But even more basic, perhaps, is the manner in which the revolution of science has hit the economies of poorer countries dependent for a livelihood on natural resources. The advent of synthetic rubber, for instance, has caused a decline of 50 per cent in natural rubber production. The use of synthetic fibres has created problems in countries depending on the export of natural fibres. The destruction of leather markets may lie ahead because of the recent development of an acceptable artificial product; and expected soon are synthetic coffee, tea and cocoa. One of the worst blows to underdeveloped countries could be the wider use of artificial sweeteners and a decreasing use of sugar by diet-conscious westerners.

The ramifications of technological improvement are numerous, Dr. Revelle said, with a notable effect being that as the underdeveloped countries grow poorer their more talented citizens are drawn away to better opportunities, leaving behind people who find themselves increasingly less able to meet their problems. They may turn to the violence of despair if their situation grows worse.

Dr. Revelle, like most people who have thought about the problems, believes that education must be the main ingredient in helping the underdeveloped countries. But the kind of education which they need is not the traditional learning.

"Radical changes are necessary," he says, "if education is to lead toward problem-solving rather than rote-learning, a belief in experimentation rather than acceptance of authority, a love of innovation rather than tradition, creativity rather than regimentation, self-confidence rather than security, and optimism rather than fatalism."

Stirrings of Independence

REMOVAL OF MR. ANTONIN Novotny from his post as first secretary of the Czechoslovakian Communist Party—he remains as president of the state—is another interesting sign of upheaval in the once monolithic structure of the Soviet East European bloc. How much liberalization, if any, is presaged for Czech citizens by this move may not be evident for some time. But it is significant that Mr. Novotny, a hard-liner, was criticized by party leaders for his attacks on writers who deviated from the strict Marxist line.

Perhaps even more significant than Mr. Novotny's loss of the key party post, so far as Eastern bloc politics goes, is Hungary's recent defection from the Soviet line, for the country has been the most loyal follower of Kremlin leadership. The Hungarian party enthusiastically endorsed the Russian call for a conference to heal the rift in world Communism, but has now warned that there must be "no condemnation of individual Communist parties or expulsion from the international Communist movement." Since the obvious purpose of Moscow in calling the conference was to read the Chinese out of the "orthodox" Communist movement, the Hungarian demand will prove disconcerting. It is modelled closely on warnings issued by the Rumanian party, as well as other parties outside the Soviet bloc.

The Hungarians, through an article in the official party paper, have also declared that world Communism can no longer be led from one centre and that "each party has to decide independently its future policy, according to the special circumstances and conditions of each country."

Such independence cannot help but make Moscow most uneasy. Soviet leaders are said to have tried desperately to save President Novotny's job for him and their failure to do so will have repercussions not only throughout Eastern Europe but in the Russian Communist Party as well. If the present Soviet leadership appears to be losing its grip there will inevitably be men waiting in the wings for a chance to seize power.

Home Instead of to Jail

ATTORNEY-GENERAL BONNER's announcement that his department is still studying the effects of the government's progressively-applied policy to send home, rather than to jail, inoffensive drunks, draws attention to the absence of public protest since the scheme was introduced last year.

A survey in some depth is doubtless necessary, since only such investigation can indicate whether or not more lenient treatment of the inebriated encourages excessive drinking—a development that should not be condoned.

Pending a report on the current analysis, however, there is little to indicate that the individual or the community suffers from this decision by the authorities to stop considering intoxication itself as a crime. If the inebriate commits an offence while under the influence, of course, he is not excused for his actions.

The system has been tried successfully in New York and other United States cities and has served a twofold purpose. It saves court time formerly wasted on simple drunk cases, and it helps to get an alcoholic victim home quickly to sober up. The policeman becomes a citizen's benefactor, not his nemesis.

Success of the policy requires a measure of responsibility from the drinking public—which must in the long run be the deciding factor. But so far, it seems, the policy is working well here.

A Balcony on Princes Street?

WHEN THE SCOTTISH NATIONAL PARTY, exhilarated by a British by-election victory, communicated its attitude to 27 foreign countries through its own voluntarily staffed foreign affairs office in Edinburgh, the announcements went to their world-wide recipients in French.

The use of that language by spokesmen for "the future independent Scotland" surely seems to invite a return courtesy. Couldn't Paris, with a bit of searching, dig up a distinguished emissary to send to the land of the heather to proclaim, perhaps from a balcony on Princes Street: "Vive l'Ecosse libre."

FROM OTTAWA

What Happened to Car Price Parity With the U.S.?

IT IS apparent from Mr. Drury's year-end statement, which appeared a trifle belatedly on Wednesday, that the department of industry is sparing no effort to spend the $147 million allocated to it for 1967-68. The non-industrial reader may find Mr. Drury's report a bit difficult because it tends to be technical and is also heavily alphabetical in the best new-dealing tradition.

Western

When manufacturers drop in for a friendly chat with the minister the talk is not solely of tariffs and subsidies; it also ranges widely over programs like BEAM, PAIT and IRDIA. But even the alphabet has its limitations; no one could pronounce MPAAP (The machinery program and adjustment assistance program) or SCSP (ship construction subsidy program) and Mr. Drury's officials have hit on the happy expedient of referring to one whole cluster of benefits (for sustaining technological capability by sharing the costs of selected defence development projects) under the general head of Vote 5 appropriations.

However, it must be a rare visitor who worries about such minor imperfections. A department of industry with $147 million to spend must be a good thing for industrial clients and one wonders how manufacturers ever got along in the old days when they had no understanding officials to turn to in Ottawa.

Although the non-specialist taxpayer may know little about BEAM, which is concerned, among other things, with the adoption of standard size units in equipment and material for easier and more efficient constructions—modular co-ordination, he will find it easier to follow Mr. Drury when the minister gets on to that old favorite, the automotive program.

This, he may remember, was partially dedicated to him in his capacity as an automobile purchaser.

Fading Dream

It is true that less and less has been heard about this aspect of the program. The original bright dream of Canadian cars at American prices lost a little of its glow when Mr. Drury began at an early date to caution us about differences in state taxes north and south of the border. But we still had the promise of a "significant narrowing of the differential" to bolster our fellow feeling with the Big Three, stuffed with subsidies, and the workers of Windsor and Oshawa as they looked forward confidently to wage parity with the Americans.

The trouble is that our benefits have not been trickling down with any notable speed. True, there were some marginal, not easily calculated cuts at the end of the first year and a few more at the beginning of the next model year—after some harsh words and a public uproar. Mr. Drury developed the theory that the differential would be narrowed more by an advance of American than by any drastic reduction of Canadian prices.

Not Forgotten

As late as last fall Mr. Martin, the very perceptive minister who represents Windsor, spoke with warm satisfaction of the "significant narrowing." So the government had not then forgotten it although few outside the government had been as successful as Mr. Martin in measuring its significance.

The manufacturers have passed up two good opportunities in this model year to narrow the differential since prices have twice been increased, without comment in Ottawa.

We now have Mr. Drury's report and it is good to read that employment in the industry remains high. We may also take pleasure from the fact that in 1967 more cars than ever were produced in Canadian factories and that exports were up.

Splendid, but what about us?

Our automotive trade deficit is down from an eight month figure of $400 million in 1966 to a comparable $315 million in 1967.

What About Us?

Wonderful, but again, what about us? Where are the benefits for which we, the customers, were called upon to rejoice?

When it comes down to the price tags, Mr. Drury seems to be at a loss for words. He tells us nothing. Instead he darts off into the department's area development program of cash grants for industries in designated locations.

Is it his ministerial view that, after these years of waiting, we have lost interest; given up hope; forgotten the dream? Or does he feel that the manufacturers have lost interest (which is understandable) and that the way to hold an audience is to talk of BEAM and PAIT and IRDIA, to each of which we contribute in a tangible, tax-paying way?

Unofficially, the differential is still with us. But officially it has vanished from sight.

By MAURICE WESTERN

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

Old Rigid Molds Blocking a Cyprus Settlement

TO the dismay of United Nations diplomats, the Cyprus problem is settling back into the old, rigid molds from which it seemed to have been blasted loose in the crisis of November-December 1967. Soviet-type of luring Cyprus into the Communist camp, plus the obstinacy and pride of Archbishop Makarios, Cyprus' president, are blamed in large part for the development.

Frye

The path toward a secure settlement is clear for virtually all to see. It has been sketched out repeatedly by UN Secretary-General U Thant and by special UN mediators.

It is to demilitarize the country, give the UN peace force (UNFICYP) enough power to keep Greek and Turkish communities from each other's throats, and then let the two communities negotiate a new constitution for the island.

The difficulty with this plan in practice is that both Makarios and the Turkish Cypriots want the constitutional settlement under advantageous conditions, Makarios with a monopoly of effective force, uninhibited by the UN, and the Turks with the threat of a Turkish invasion army hanging over the island.

Each of these advantages is anathema to the intended target. Both could be removed, were it not that the Soviet Union and Makarios refuse to let the UN have a real power to fill the power vacuum that would be created.

Strange Liaison

The love affair between Makarios and the Kremlin is one of the stranger liaisons of international politics. There is no real affinity between an archbishop of the Greek Orthodox Church and Communism. Each is using the other, or believes it is using the other, to achieve its ends.

The Soviet tactic is to encourage a power vacuum: no Greek-Cypriot National Guard, no Turkish-Cypriot irregulars, no Greek or Turkish regular army personnel, no "NATO" (British) bases—and no adequate UN force to take their place.

Into this vacuum, Moscow hopes to thrust the active and ambitious Cypriot Communist party. If all alternate instruments of power were to be attenuated, leaving only the Reds available, Makarios might have to rely on them for the exercise of his authority. Hence Soviet resistance, last month, to meaningful expansion of the authority of UNFICYP.

Makarios is playing a subtler and even more dangerous game. He wants to bend the Turkish-Cypriot minority to his will.

He would be willing to use an enlarged UN peace force to that end—but the UN will not play by those rules. It wants to disengage the two sides, releasing both his pressure on the Turks and theirs on him.

Makarios therefore refuses to give the UN the freedom and power it needs to keep peace. If the UN cannot be a sword in his hands, he refuses to let the sword be sharpened.

With the Soviet veto at his disposal, and authority in the last analysis to order the UN off his territory, Makarios has been able to get away with it. The West does not dare let the UN pull out.

Where this leaves Cyprus in relation to power rivalries remains to be seen.

Greece's army has been profoundly weakened by political upheaval. Athens is no longer a real military inhibition to the Turks.

Moreover Greece has, in effect, recognized that it cannot achieve enosis (unity of Cyprus with Greece). A major reason for Greek-Turk antagonism has therefore been removed.

But the threat of a Communist Cyprus remains a major peril for Turkey. Cyprus dominates sea approaches to Turkey's southern coast. Turks refer to the island as a "cork in the bottle."

If Greece, and with it, the Aegean islands, were ever to fall into hostile hands—if, for example, a Communist revolution were to succeed, where King Constantine failed, in toppling the right-wing junta—the southern coast would be Turkey's only reliable outlet to the Mediterranean.

American Pressure

Turkey therefore has many of the same impulses to intervene, and fewer inhibitions. Only American pressure has kept her from landing an invasion force.

The Soviet Union has not counterbalanced this Turkish threat, perhaps because it helps to keep Makarios dependent on Soviet support.

Turkey has sought to anticipate and fend off possible Soviet restraint by attempting a rapprochement with Moscow. She has used, to this end, an objective she shares with the Kremlin—opposition to enosis—attempting to keep alive the enosis peril for this purpose even after it has very largely died.

Where the Kremlin has had to choose between cultivating Ankara and cultivating Makarios, however, the archbishop has almost always been its choice, even though luring Turkey out of NATO must also be a considerable temptation for the Kremlin.

The deadlock was papered over last month with a temporary extension of UNFICYP: but there is little sign that the time thus purchased will be used to negotiate an accord.

The world could easily have another major Cyprus crisis on its hands in the all-too-near future.

Shut Out Private Cars

May I comment on the newspaper article I read recently about a traffic problem in Victoria. My solution is to deal ruthlessly with the motor car. Only by closing central areas to private cars while providing fast and frequent public service transport at a cheaper rate will the buses be made to pay.—John Lynas, 572 Niagara.

Thanks

May I express my thanks and those of the Senior Citizens Campaign Council to all who donated to our appeal for needy bedridden pensioners, and to all who helped in any way.—(Mrs.) Annie McVie, Secretary and Convenor of Welfare.

Pickles or Pickled?

In view of its local interest and implications, I suggest you may like to publish this clipping from "The Daily Telegraph" of December 29.—E.F.W.

Sir—In view of the fact that aspirins, pickles, sauces and vinegar products are now discovered to turn the breathalyzer green, may we ask the forensic laboratories to publish a list of foods and sauces we should not eat before driving?

Also, it is well known that a diabetic's breath will turn the breathalyzer green, even though teetotal.

Have any special arrangements been made for diabetics or sufferers from other disorders with a high pH content to prevent wrongful arrest by the police?—Charles de Coti-Marsh, Food Technologist, London, S.W.I.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

To the north of Mount Blenheim there is a fascinating valley that is well worth the trip in by way of Bilson or Cole Creek.

This area was logged off some time ago and now the firs are beginning to take hold against the broad leaf trees and shrubs.

There is an abundance of arbutus growing all along the hillsides.

As you wander along some old logging road you will find that there are many red alder groves. Each one seems to be in a different stage of development.

There is a fine growth running to the southwest. There the trees are 30 to 40 years old and among them you can see where the loggers felled some giant cedars by the old spring board method.

They apparently cut the logs into blocks for shake bolts and never took them out. Now they are covered with mosses and lichens which make an interesting study.

Higher up the creek the alders are about eight to ten years old, while beneath them you find small seedlings of Douglas fir and hemlock. In a few years the alders will have disappeared and the conifers will take over.

The alders have played their part in re-establishing the soil by introducing nitrogen and by their leaves and broken twigs that have created a humus that enables the firs to establish themselves and start a new forest.

Stand on some high point and you can see how the ice scored the sides of the high hills. They are now covered with a green carpet of moss.

Look to the high sky line and you will see how the tops of the trees along the ridge are bent towards the east. This is caused by the prevailing southwestern winds from the strait.

Could Kierans Be the One? Medical Criticism Pours In On Heart Transplant Attempt

OTTAWA—The candidates for the Liberal leadership began to look this week like young widows at the end of their mourning period. Having done the decent, circumspect thing and kept mute in the three weeks since Lester Pearson resigned, they're now about to throw off their veils and don their finest plumage to woo the delegates.

Before January is out, Paul Hellyer, Mitchell Sharp, Paul Martin, Alan MacEachen, Robert Winters, and John Turner will all discover that they're indispensable to the nation's future.

NEWMAN

First man into the field, due to declare next Tuesday, is Eric Kierans, the Montreal socialist millionaire, whose reform tendencies and sharp tongue have upset every one of the many institutions in which he has involved himself.

Eric William Kierans is a deceptive quantity on first encounter. His open face, stocky build and plain manner make the uninitiated observer wonder what the excitement is all about. It's only when he begins to expound some pet theory or to talk about Quebec or Canada's future, that the real man emerges.

His forehead creases with excitement, the hard Irish blue eyes dart in concentration, and his words tumble in a strange mixture of fatalism and Utopian fervor.

He is possessed by a strong streak of existentialism, rare in Catholics. He feels that when a challenge of any major proportions exists, he destroys a part of himself if he runs away from it.

All this adds up to a barely subdued tension that draws other men to him, especially when it's felt in small groups, and marks him as one of the most remarkable figures in Canadian public life.

The tip-off of Kierans' intentions came with the resignation on January 1 of Charles Denis as director of information for the Quebec Department of Education. Denis was executive assistant to Kierans while he was president of the Montreal Stock Exchange, and minister of national revenue and health in the Lesage cabinets.

Now Denis, who is extraordinarily able and versatile, intends to devote his full time to the promotion of Kierans' new federal political career.

At first glance, the Kierans candidacy appears to be the height of personal presumption. He has never led a government, has never sat in the House of Commons, has little access to the established organizational apparatus of the federal Liberal party. His elevation to the prime ministership would require the two dozen members of the Pearson cabinet to admit there is no one among them fit for the succession.

Yet this is exactly what Kierans believes. He sees himself as the right man to lead the nation in this crucial period of our history, championing a relevant set of new ideas rooted in the radical small-"l" liberalism which has been gradually abandoned by the party in power.

Because the period of changing leadership is the ideal occasion for a party to completely reassess its position, Kierans is convinced he can revitalize a political movement which has been largely hived into Quebec and urban Ontario.

"We have to start all over again with basic principles and establish a Liberal party that welcomes instead of resists change" he recently told a friend.

ERIC KIERANS ... welcomes change

Outside Experts

The closest example to the kind of regime he is talking about would be the radically-oriented Lesage government of 1960, which brought into the administrative mainstream a whole host of outside experts, willing and capable of challenging the preconceived notions of used-up politicians and inflexible civil servants.

Kierans' main policy concerns include national unity (on the basis of distributing powers as well as symbolic concessions); dramatic methods of raising the productivity of Canadian industry; and the preservation of the practical elements in Walter Gordon's bid to encourage Canadian economic sovereignty.

The depth of the support that already exists for Kierans is difficult to judge, because it consists mainly of Liberals who fail to be attracted by any of the more obvious candidates. During the next 90 days, however, Kierans intends to throw himself into a whirlwind constituency-by-constituency campaign, concentrating on British Columbia, Manitoba and Ontario.

Quebec Base

Despite his defeat of Rene Levesque at the last meeting of the Quebec Liberal Federation, he believes that he still retains a considerable power base in his home province, particularly outside Montreal.

Although Kierans' interest to date has been entirely in provincial politics, Daniel Johnson once remarked that "Kierans is in the right pew, but the wrong church. He should be in Ottawa."

Kierans has one distinct advantage over his competitors. Because they've all been members of the Pearson administration, they are limited in the number of policies they can advance, without either breaking cabinet solidarity, or leaving themselves open to the accusation that having thought up such brilliant ideas, they should have enacted them long ago.

Kierans is not concerned with the past, or having to defend his record. He wants drastic action on a wide variety of fronts for the future. Probably the best exposition of his political philosophy came during an off-the-cuff press conference he held in Quebec City, on September 20, 1966:

Abundance

"Modern liberalism," he said at the time, "goes further than the liberalism of the 18th and 19th centuries, which restricted output to what can be produced under a free-enterprise system. Modern liberalism knows that our present society can produce an industrial abundance which will banish hunger, sickness and ignorance if only we have the courage to declare these aims to be our own and to take the democratic decisions that are necessary."

"Liberalism decides in favor of people and their needs when economic decisions are taken. True liberalism cannot admit that in boom periods we are too rich and in depressions too poor to satisfy the real needs of our people. A liberal will insist that society be so ordered and directed that it will use its industrial abundance to wipe away hunger and disease, and this without loss of individual, political and cultural freedoms. The social vision of liberalism can be revolutionary without being totalitarian."

New Thrust

Whether as a leader or a key member of the post-Pearson administration, Kierans would provide a new and exciting approach in a government whose ideological thrust has grown stale.

In all of his many careers—as a Montreal industrialist rescuing faltering companies, as dean of the McGill School of Commerce, as head of the Montreal Stock Exchange (attacking the voodoo philosophy of Social Credit), as a minister in the Lesage government, and as the man who beat down the nationalism of Rene Levesque—Kierans has never been afraid of the seemingly insurmountable odds he has had to face.

Now he is confronted with the most formidable challenge of his career. It would take a foolhardy prophet to write off his chances.

CAPETOWN—Should another heart transplant have been attempted so soon after the first one?

Inevitably, doctors all over the world are arguing this point. They are even asking whether the operation on Washkansky was permissible.

The reply of the Groote Schuur team is that, although Washkansky lived for only 18 days, it was not the donor heart of 25-year-old Miss Denise Ann Darvall that failed him. The heart went on beating strongly right to the end. The cause of death was bilateral pneumonia.

Dr. M. C. Botha, pathologist in charge of the blood grouping laboratories, explained: "We have no clear laboratory or clinical evidence that rejection played a major part in the outcome of the operation."

This answers, partially at least, the criticism by doctors overseas that the South African doctors acted prematurely because, while other teams in other countries were equipped surgically to perform the operation just as completely as the South Africans, they had delayed their attempts until they knew more about the rejection process.

Issue Aside

The South African doctors admit that they knew nothing more about the rejection process than is known at other centres, but their post-operation view, that there is nothing to lead them to suspect that rejection played any role in Washkansky's death, rather thrusts this issue to one side.

This naked-eye examination has still to be confirmed, of course, by tissue analysis. The donor heart was removed from Washkansky's body before he was buried, and some tissues have been sent to London for a check analysis. The results should be known shortly.

Professor Barnard has stated that the probable cause of Washkansky's death was a germ in the nose or throat. "Whatever precautions one takes," he said, "one cannot eliminate germs entirely. Germs in the nose or throat probably caused the bilateral pneumonia which led to Mr. Washkansky's death. I do not believe that the rejection of the heart by the body was responsible for the pneumonia."

Risk of Germs

"Even if a patient is lying in a sterilized room, movement and the raising of dust nevertheless can give germs a chance to do what we would not like them to do," said Barnard.

Barnard has added that, in Washkansky's case, "the dice were loaded against us"—Washkansky was a diabetic, and he also had a leg infection. The diabetes probably made Washkansky more susceptible to infection.

Prof. J. G. Thompson, a pathologist who conducted the postmortem on Washkansky, said his examination showed that Washkansky had suffered an unusually heavy attack of pneumonia. Had pneumonia not intervened, there was a possibility of Washkansky living for a "good few years."

Prof. V. Christer, the cardiologist, confirmed that the heart had stood up "remarkably" until the point of death.

But the voices of dissent in the medical profession have not been silenced by these arguments. The view is being expressed that the immunologists have a long way to go before the rejection problem is solved without increasing the risk of infection.

It is a question of finding a happy medium between the suppression of the patient's immunological defences and the risk of infection to which this exposes him—conditions which differ in every individual.

The dissenting doctors argue that the drugs which were used massively to suppress the rejection symptoms also reduced the body's resistance to bacteria, and in this condition infection is liable to break out at one of a number of points. It is only a half-answer, therefore, to say that rejection played no part in Washkansky's death—it remains the underlying problem.

Barnard's reply to this is that the operation has shown the heart may be less susceptible to rejection than other organs like kidneys. It may be possible, therefore, to use fewer immuno-suppressive drugs in the next transplant operation.

French doctors have criticized the use of cobalt bomb treatment on Washkansky after he had developed pneumonia. "It is out of date and not used any more on kidney transplants," they said. Another French doctor has described the transfusion of white blood cells as "giving arms to the devil."

Generally, the criticism is that surgical knowledge is greater than biological experience. A leading Johannesburg doctor, however, has added a further criticism: "Although it is a great experimental surgical feat, this heart transplant operation has limited practical application." (Professor Barnard has rejected the use of the word "experiment" to describe the operation on Washkansky).

Undeterred, therefore, by Washkansky's death, and by the misgivings of some doctors, the Groote Schuur transplant team has gone ahead with its work. It has asked for donors from the "O" blood group, to build up a bank of white blood corpuscles. And apart from a possible difference in cross-infection prevention it will make no change in either the surgical technique or the post-operative care.

NEWS HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

Reviewed by Peter Murray, Times Wire News Editor

Faced by a continuing decline in its dollar supply, the U.S. was forced to take drastic measures this week to stop the drain.

Main target of the restrictive action announced by President Johnson is Western Europe, where the biggest U.S. deficits have occurred in the post-war period.

The U.S. has sustained this deficit over the past 20 years through sale of her huge gold hoard to countries which had accumulated an excess of dollars. Now her gold holdings are only half what they were in 1949 when they reached a peak of $24 billion.

The recent monetary upheaval touched off by devaluation of the pound put heavy pressure on the dollar, increasing the outward flow and leading to the new restrictions. The 1967 deficit was close to a record $4 billion.

Direct U.S. investment in Europe now is banned. It had increased four-fold in the last 15 years.

Britain, hard-pressed by economic problems of her own, was partially excluded by being placed in a special category of trading nations along with Canada, Japan, Australia and a few other oil-producing countries.

Investment in these countries will be allowed to continue in 1968 at 65 per cent of the 1965-66 levels.

Canada is not expected to be especially hard hit. The 65 per cent figure applies to the group, not to individual countries, and the level could be higher for this country.

The U.S. has always enjoyed a favorable trade balance with Canada and is not likely to take steps that would jeopardize this position. A possible point of friction could be Canada's insistence that U.S. firms re-invest their accumulated earnings here.

In fact, Canada is expected to benefit from the new U.S. restrictions on tourist travel. Johnson appealed to Americans to stop holidaying in Europe and spend their vacation money in the Western Hemisphere where it has more chance of finding its way back to the U.S. He said he would follow the appeal up with restrictive legislation. It would likely take the form of a limit on the amount of funds American tourists can take abroad.

Loss of the swelling U.S. tourist trade would be a heavy blow to countries such as Britain, France, Spain and Italy.

In addition to these measures the U.S. put limits on the foreign loans that can be made by American banks, and announced her intention of cutting back her overseas aid programs and defence spending.

There was another flurry of excitement this week about possible Vietnam peace talks but, as in the past, there was very little to go on.

It dangled on the slender thread of interpretation of the difference between the words "could" and "would."

In the past the North Vietnamese have stated that if the U.S. stopped bombing then negotiations "could" get started. Last weekend Hanoi's foreign minister, Nguyen Duy Trinh, was quoted as saying if the bombing and "other war-like actions" against North Vietnam were halted by the U.S. then peace talks "would" get started.

The U.S., which has shown little indication of wanting to scale down the fighting to test Hanoi's reaction, declared that it is "investigating" through diplomatic channels to determine if there are any new grounds for optimism.

The South Vietnamese, meanwhile, wasted no time in pouring cold water on the latest talk of negotiations.

President Nguyen Van Thieu said North Vietnam was "not serious" about seeking peace. And the rubber-stamp House of Representatives in Saigon passed a resolution opposing talks with the National Liberation Front, the political arm of the Viet Cong.

One unconfirmed report said Hanoi had made tentative approaches to Cambodia, Burma and Laos to see if they were willing to host preliminary peace talks in their capitals.

Cambodia continued its running feud with the U.S. over friction along its frontier with South Vietnam and President Johnson dispatched Ambassador to India Charles Bowles to try and smooth relations. China declared she would back Cambodia if there was any encroachment by American or South Vietnamese troops on her territory and delivered a consignment of military aid, including jet fighters.

Dr. Christian Barnard and his daring team of South African doctors completed history's third transplant of a human heart, their second such operation in less than a month. Both previous patients died.

This time they took the heart of 24-year-old Clive Haupt, who died of a brain hemorrhage and placed it in the body of Dr. Philip Blaiberg, a 58-year-old Cape Town dentist who had suffered a series of crippling coronary attacks.

Blaiberg is white, Haupt of mixed white and African parentage which put him in the South African category of "colored", a class that lives almost in limbo. They shun close relationships with full-blooded Africans and are denied them by law with whites.

If they had met before, Blaiberg and Haupt could not have sat together on a bus or gone to the same beach.

But there was no law to say they couldn't exchange hearts.

Little Place for the Young In Leadership Deliberations

By GERALD WARING

OTTAWA — Reports that Paul Martin was jiving and twisting at a pre-Christmas party here are giving the foreign minister a new nimbus. Like Bobby Kennedy got when he started pushing people into his swimming pool, Mr. Martin has issued no denial of these reports, no statement that he was misobserved, or that his twisting was taken out of context.

WARING

A politician of his talent cannot be unaware that these reports, true or otherwise, may cause delegates to the Liberal convention to revise their opinions of his suitability for the prime ministership. Can his reputation as a solid, steady, experienced, right-of-centre left-winger survive all this?

It may be true, as John Turner likes to point out, that a quarter of the voters are under 30. This is just about Mr. Turner's favorite statistic, for while he himself is a senior citizen of 38, he's still the youngest of the gaggle of Liberal hopefuls.

But Turner may not have the under-30 vote sewn up, what with the emergence of the new, youthful Mr. Martin to challenge Turner's own dance floor image. They might end up splitting the kiddie vote while Paul Hellyer or Mitch Sharp romps home with the bacon.

What do younger Liberals want? According to the December "Young Liberal Voice" published by the B.C. Young Liberals, "A mature man with lots of experience... will be tired, unimaginative and uninspiring... We need a young, dynamic, inspiring leader." And it proceeds to damn them all except Turner.

Of course, this was before that Christmas party when Mr. Martin showed his fancy footwork. No doubt the January "Voice" will describe him as "a mature young man with lots of experience."

Fact is, there are plenty of able and ambitious young Liberals in the party and Parliament — but they're not well enough known to be taken seriously. And that is Prime Minister Pearson's fault. He gave cabinet preference to those he knew from the old days — the Martins and the MacEachens, so that many able younger MPs remain virtually unknown.

Jack Davis, Herb Gray, Don Macdonald, Richard Cashin, John Munro, John Stewart, Ron Basford, Bud Orange, Joe Maculoso, Bob Stanbury — they are all part of the Liberal government's young look that the public rarely sees.

Not one of them is credible as the man to become prime minister of Canada in April. But with some of them, two or three years in cabinet might have given them that credibility. Who would have given any credibility, two years ago, to the idea of Jean Marchand or Pierre Elliott Trudeau as prime minister?

Young Turks are suffered more or less gladly by their political elders because they contribute sparkle, verve and enthusiasm. But when the chips are down it's the Establishment that decides policy and swings conventions.

How much weight will the young Grits carry at the convention? Numerically not much. The way delegates are to be elected, selected, appointed or anointed, with heavy preponderance of parliamentarians and ward heeled, it does not appear likely that the under-30 Liberals will form more than 20 or 25 per cent of the total.

When Mr. Martin adds up these figures he may never see him twist again.

The Dangerous Idea Of Conceding a Point

By ART STOTT

"Ha!" said my cynical friend who subscribes to a highly respected American newspaper. "Now I have seen everything."

"I have just been reading a reputable columnist who advises his fellow Americans to use the utmost care in ascertaining their facts. He offers an example. If they customarily read newspapers and periodicals of the left on such issues as Vietnam, they should balance their impressions by reading an equal amount in newspapers and periodicals of the right. When they have done this, he then reminds them of the differences which occur between writers describing the same event. One sees details clearly that another misses, and vice versa."

STOTT

"How," my friend asked, "can a man preserve his prejudices if he does this honestly? Why, if you carry that idea to the ultimate, a person would begin to see reason behind the unreasonable actions of people with whom he differs. Just let yourself agree that an opponent has a point and you're on the long, slippery slope that could end, if not in a reconciliation, at least in a compromise and perhaps a dangerous mutual respect."

"The whole idea is as destructive of strong national stands as that statement from U Thant some time ago when he left Moscow and told reporters that in the process of time what we call Communism and what we call Western democracy would eventually merge. Communists extending more rights to the individual, democracy moving further into areas of socialism."

"It's crazy. First thing you know, you'd be thinking that people were people, actually human beings, even if they didn't see eye-to-eye with you. How are you going to foster nationalism that way? If you don't know, in your own quiet way, that you're superior to other folk, how are you going to show them how to run their own business? How are you going to be filled with righteous indignation because the lesser breeds are doing something wrong?"

"Why listen to the other guy? He may convince you and then where do your old convictions go? You're left drifting. You may even become a member of the permissive society, making allowances for this and making allowances for that.

"You see, you've gotta stand on certain principles. Your own point of view is always based on principles. It's only the other person who builds on error and ignorance. Once you let the faintest hint of doubt assail you, you're in trouble. It spreads and grows. Soon you're not sure that the things you took to be fundamental are actually basic and beyond question."

"If you open the door of your mind to intrusions, who knows where you're going to wind up? As long as you know that the man who doesn't agree with you is some kind of nut—and more likely than not a Communist as well—you're safe. All you have to do is keep batting him down. If he won't accept your arguments, why, just a clobber him over the head. He's unenlightened."

"If enough people started weighing the pros and cons of an issue, why, some of our most revered institutions could collapse. As long as the Arabs know that anything Israel suggests is wrong, and as long as the Israelis are certain that gestures from the Arabs are false, we need the Security Council. Same with India and Pakistan, or the United States and Red China. Should the strong-minded protagonists of each side suddenly admit the other guy may be right, they'd cease to be strong-minded on points of conflict. Eliminate those conflicts and what do you do with the peace-keeping functions of the United Nations?"

"Can't you see what would happen if the ideas of the reputable columnist I have been reading were widely accepted? Everybody might become a Pollyanna. In this world of realism who wants that?"

"No," said my cynical friend, "that's not the way the world of today operates. History shows us the progress that has come from conflict. Conflict arises from differences. Differences usually stem from the refusal of one faction to tolerate certain views of another."

"If it hadn't been for conflict, we might still be back in the Garden without ever having tasted an apple and with nothing to wear but a fig-leaf."

"What would the reputable columnist do for a living if his proposal led to an age of sweet reason and light?"

"But don't worry too much. It isn't going to happen."

First Victoria Visit For Telephone Choir

Already widely known throughout British Columbia by reason of radio and television performances and tours, the B.C. Telephone Choir will mark its 13th season with a first visit to Victoria on Jan. 14.

On that Sunday evening the choir will appear with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra on "a Pops" concert at University of Victoria gymnasium.

Under the direction of Leslie W. McKel, the 70-voice B.C. Tel Choir has performed in various centres throughout B.C. and with the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra.

Almost every category of employee in the company is represented — operators, installers, clerks, managers, cable splicers, stenographers and engineers.

A highly professional and flexible group, the choir's repertoire ranges from show music and old time favorites to classical works.

In Victoria the ensemble will sing a group of spirituals and Keteby's In a Monastery Garden unaccompanied and an oratorio-epic group with the orchestra.

A feature of the orchestral portion of the program to be conducted by Laszlo Gati will be the Grieg A Minor piano Concerto with Alberta pianist Irene Weiss as soloist.

Twenty-one-year-old Miss Weiss was born in Cardston, Alta., and now lives in Calgary.

She is at present a scholarship student — Canada Council, Ford of Canada and Juilliard — at the Juilliard School of Music where she has been studying with Irwin Freundlich since 1965.

In 1963 Miss Weiss won first prize on the CBC Talent Festival which was held in Montreal.

Earlier she had won major awards in Alberta music festivals. She is a gold medalist and the holder of two performer degrees, one from the Royal Conservatory in Toronto and one from the Western Board (University of Alberta at Edmonton).

Professionally Miss Weiss has performed 23 times with major orchestras across Canada, including Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg.

Other engagements for the current season include a recital of violin and piano sonatas in New York with Juilliard graduate Judith Wendel.

Most recent honor came when she was chosen as one of six winners for a $2,500 prize offered by International Nickel Company of Canada.

The winners were selected by a three-man jury consisting of Sir Ernest MacMillan, Sir Willard Pelletier and John Avison.

Swift-Moving Rapids Stopped Big Jetboat

One of the most complete movie documentaries ever made of the legendary Headless Valley of the Nahanni River in Canada's Northwest Territories will be shown at the McPherson Playhouse on Jan. 15.

There will be two showings, one at 6 p.m., and the other at 8:30.

The film is the work of Ray Bentley of Kimmaird, B.C., and his wife, Babe, who spent four months exploring the magnificent river with its spectacular waterfalls, rapids and hot springs.

Tom Costello of Spokane, Wash., a third member of the expedition, is one of the stars of the film.

The film was shot in 16-millimetre Ektachrome.

Mr. Bentley made the journey in two stages. He first shot footage from the air and then later made the journey up-river on a 250-horsepower jetboat.

"It was quite a journey," he said. "There were rapids which made the jetboat stop in its tracks."

He was impressed with the wildlife in the area, he said.

"I was able to photograph Grizzly bears from as close as 75 feet," he said. "I think I shot every animal that walks or flies north of the 60th parallel."

While Nahanni is no longer a place of mystery, he said, it still remained one of the least visited places on the continent.

Of interest, he said are the hot springs of Headless Valley where the vegetation is different.

"There are even caves that howl when the wind blows the right way," he added.

SPECTACULAR
He said one of the most spectacular sights is Virginia Falls which plummet twice the height of Niagara.

The Bentleys looked for gold on their expedition.

"We searched for a new mother lode," he said, but found nothing except some small nuggets in remote creek beds—nothing to write about."

He estimated the over-all cost for travel and production of the Nahanni film at about $35,000. His film in final form was edited from 12,000 feet of shooting.

The Bentleys will be on the stage when they show their film.

WITH OSCAR THE SLOB AND FASTIDIOUS FELIX

Another Laugh-a-Line Comedy

The most unlikely two-some you ever encountered — Oscar the slob, and fastidious Felix — The Odd Couple.

It's another of Neil Simon's laugh-a-line comedies — Tony Nicholson's production, being presented by Bastion Theatre at the McPherson Playhouse for one week only, opening January 12.

Here's the situation: Oscar Madison and some of the boys play a great deal of poker in the comfortably untidy surroundings of the worst-kept apartment in New York. Oscar's main idea is to win enough to pay his wife's alimony.

One evening, one of the poker players is missing — Felix Ungar, a self-pitying, allergenic, ultra-tidy little man.

MUST FIND HIM

They phone his wife and discover that he has left his family, leaving behind a suicide telegram (just to make sure someone finds him in time).

Where is he going to kill himself? Not at home — he wouldn't want to wake the kids up. Not the Washington Bridge — he might not be stopped in time.

Of course! With his friends. And sure enough, that's where he comes, looking for sympathy and attention.

Embarrassed by his display of unmanly emotion, the poker game breaks up. The kindly Oscar invites his friend to move in with him. And so the odd couple's "marriage" begins. It is doomed.

From now on the poker games are played in elegance, with Felix cleaning ashtrays and serving exotic sandwiches.

DOUBLE DATE
"Would you mind eating over the dish... I've just vacuumed the rug."

Oscar's friends leave, swearing they won't return to play until he gets rid of "Mary Poppins" and his Pure-a-tron air freshener.

Finally Oscar talks Felix into a double date with the two young lovelies upstairs, Gwendolyn and Cecily.

This attempt at a romantic evening is ruined once again, by Felix' passion for cooking. And so it goes, in Neil Simon's witty, contemporary comedy.

Playing Felix is guest star Harry Hill, with Robert Price as the other half of the mismatched pair.

Others in the poker game are Joe Moore and Dan Christian, and the two lovelies are Dorothy and Sylvia Hosie. Curtain time is 8:30 nightly. Tickets are on sale now at the McPherson box office, 386-6121.

The Sounding Board

By AUDREY ST.D. JOHNSON

First applause of 1968, in my book, goes to A. G. Coning and the Mayfair Merchants' Association of which he is manager.

This week, on behalf of the association, he purchased for the Victoria Symphony Society 100 student tickets for the Jan. 25 McPherson Playhouse recital by the great French violinist, Christian Ferras.

It was not done as any part of a publicity gimmick. I only heard about it coincidentally and not from Mr. Coning.

He talked about it when tackled, mainly because he hopes others might give some thought to the idea.

"The big merchant and other business organizations take a lot from the community," he observes. He feels this is one way a small form of investment can be made in the community in return.

The plan is that the tickets should be carefully distributed to students of musical promise and ability throughout Greater Victoria.

Concert Proves Rare Treat

"In the past we have bought blocks of tickets to give away for circuses," he says. "But there are very few kids for whom circus admissions are beyond reach. On the other hand concert tickets are a pretty expensive proposition for most music students."

Mr. Coning feels that it is high time organizations such as the one he represents gave some consideration to the mind of the coming generation.

He speaks, as so many have been doing, of the ever-shortening work week and is concerned, with many thinking people today, over the use of the expanded leisure time.

"It is no good," he says, "waiting until unhealthy and anti-social activity begins to fill the idle time."

It is now, he feels, that we must lay a groundwork for the constructive use of the great leisure that is to be ours in the latter half of the century.

This is indeed an important service that major organizations such as the Mayfair Merchants can render in this city by following their example.

Prices as Low as Possible

But if it is to bring finest international artists to the city, there is a floor below which it dare not go.

So this is where Mr. Coning's Mayfair people come in and—hopefully—others as the months go by.

Through the purchase and distribution of blocks of tickets they will do a great service to the young people, the Symphony Society and—in the long run—the community.

I hope, incidentally, that Victorians realize the greatness of the artist who is coming their way this month.

The French violinist, Christian Ferras, has been acclaimed by the world's foremost authorities as one of the five greatest international violinists of our time.

Critics on three continents have raved about his "golden tone," "breathtaking technique" and magnificent personality.

His Deutsche Grammophon records of the Brahms and Sibelius Concertos, played under the baton of von Karajan, have been praised in the highest terms by experts on both sides of the Atlantic.

Ferras has performed with every major orchestra in the United States and has twice been signally honored by Pablo Casals at the Prades and Puerto Rico Casals Festivals.

Frequently in Victoria, people are heard to moan after an artist or event has come and gone—"Everybody tells me I missed something wonderful. But you see I'd never heard of Blank..."

This time he is a little adventurous. Forget that Ferras hasn't been introduced to you via your living room TV world peephole. Prepare yourself for a personal voyage of discovery.

Ferras will play his recital—accompanied by Robin Wood—on the Wednesday before he is due to appear as soloist with Laszlo Gati and the Victoria Symphony playing the great Brahms Violin Concerto.

For a real experience with the phenomenal artist, it would be best if at all possible not to miss either event.

Mount View Band Bound for Seattle

First of several school instrumental concerts to be presented this winter at McPherson Playhouse will be given at 2:30 p.m. Sunday by the Mount View School Band and soloists.

The Mount View Band is directed by C. Howard Denike, an outstanding bandmaster, orchestra conductor and music educator in this city for a number of years.

Mr. Denike is music instructor at Mount View and Reynolds Secondary Schools, band director at both schools and at the University of Victoria and Lakehill, Cloverdale and Cedar Hill Elementary Schools.

TO SEATTLE

The Mount View Band has been invited to perform at the Music Educators' Conference in Seattle in March and will represent the senior secondary schools of B.C. in a provincial group attending the conference.

Proceeds of Sunday's concert will assist the band to travel to Seattle for the conference.

The program will include the overture to Strauss' Die Fledermaus with oboe solo by Bruce Grainger, highlights from Brigadoon and Leroy Anderson's Sleighride.

Tenor David Galbraith will be guest soloist, joining the band in the selections from Brigadoon and another Broadway show, Damn Yankees.

Norman Leyden's Concerto for Trombones will feature Ian Fetteley (Victoria Symphony and National Youth Orchestra member), Dean Josephson and Bill Sample.

Jan will also be featured with trumpeter Brett Grainger and saxophonist George Kiraly in Howard Cale's Scottish Rhapsody.

SOUND OF ALPERT
Sound of Herb Alpert and the Tijuana Brass will have soloists Brett Grainger, Denis Somner and David Rae, and a Concert Piece for Bassoon and Chamber Band by Phillips will feature Alan Denike, winner of the bassoon class in Vancouver Music Festival for the past two years.

A Handel Concerto Grosso is one of the classics on the program. Flautists George Girard and Marilyn Shaw and clarinetist Don Mayer will be soloists. Don was winner of the Centennial B.C. Provincial wind instrument competition last spring.

In a modern clarinet quartet with band accompaniment, Clarinets in Residence by David Bennett, Don Mayer, Joan Lamb, Donna Zapf and Susan Stecombe will be the players.

Admission to the concert is by ticket, available from any band member or music store, or through a silver donation at the door.

OUTSTANDING SUCCESS of Victoria Senior Secondary School Drama Club presentation of the delightful comedy, Teahouse of the August Moon, will carry the group for the first time, out of the school auditorium where it was first produced a month ago, onto the stage of McPherson Playhouse.

Directed by H. C. Farr, Teahouse will be seen there Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. In this scene a hot argument rages between Higga-Jigga (Tibbie Mason-Hurley) left, and Capt. Fisby (Peter McKinnon) with Sakini (Ian Pool) the middleman. The cast includes a real live goat.

DIAMOND IN THE GROOVE

Fuel Added to Bach Debate

By BERYL PROUDMAN

If E. Power Biggs suggests a project, Columbia records, unquestioning, produces it no matter how extravagant or wild the suggestion may seem; for the sale of millions of Biggs' recordings over the years has ensured the company of his unerring judgment in matters of music.

The new two-record Columbia album (M2S 764 stereo, M2L 364 mono), in which Biggs plays Bach's Six Trio-Sonatas on a pedal harpsichord, adds fuel to the long-disputed question—did Bach write these works for organ or harpsichord?

While scholars and purists have debated this question for years, music-listeners, lacking the opportunity to compare performances on the two instruments, have watched this intellectual exercise from the wings unqualified to join in the fray.

Now, with the release of this exciting harpsichord album the listener can compare performances, for there are excellent organ-recordings already on the market.

At last, he too can consider whether Bach had the organ or the harpsichord in mind when he wrote these works as home-studies for his eldest son Wilhelm Friedemann.

Several advantages of playing them on a large pedal-harpsichord became apparent as one listens to Biggs' performance.

The three voices are, at all times, perfectly clear and distinct and the pedal-line is given equal prominence as is fitting in trio-sonatas.

These satisfying, straightforward sounding trio-sonatas are so difficult to play that many performers avoid them, but Biggs brings to his playing of these taxing works, all the resources of his great skill and wide experience.

The verve, vitality and sense of excitement he lends to the accelerated fast movements and the calculated accentuation of each jewelled note in the slowed slow movements, bring out all the undoubted, marvellous beauty in them.

Occasionally a trill is not as clearly defined as its manifold brethren, occasionally the forward-surge excitement pulls the tempo a fraction, but what little is lost in precision is more than compensated by the increased dramatic effect of his interpretation.

The Challis pedal-harpsichord, a lovely recording instrument, has many varied stop combinations. At times the clear bell-like tones make the instrument resemble an exquisitely-tuned carillon, at others it sounds like a swarm of angry bees, and in one movement it could be a banjo.

The pedals have an unusual long sustaining period and are equipped with a Venetian Swell for added effect.

Sometimes they stalk around like a 16' Dulciana stop, but when staccato notes are played on the pedals dampened to a single string, they sound more like tuned wooden blocks clacking.

E. Power Biggs displays all the variety of his instrument by a constant change of tone color which, while it might appal the harpsichord purist, delights the average listener.

Two bonus concertos, a bright gay arrangement of one by Ernst and Vivaldi's beautiful A Major, fill the fourth side.

Rhythmic subtleties and tasteful ornaments abound throughout and particularly enhance the haunting third movement of the fourth sonata and the splendid Fugue in the second.

The records, impeccably engineered, are clearly banded and limited to two sonatas a side, which makes them easy to handle.

When you have heard these records you may side with the scholars in their academic dilemma or you may be unable to decide whether you prefer to hear them on organ or harpsichord.

In this indecision you and I will be able to enjoy them when played on either instrument, and perhaps, in this we follow Bach's wishes most closely.

Whichever way you decide, there is much to admire and enjoy in this stimulating new Columbia album.

"That teacher who wants to stamp out Thursdays has a good idea, but I'd rather stamp out January," said the man from Craigdarroch.

"I'd wake the week after Christmas and all the Christmas bills would be paid, the free would be gone and the lights stowed away."

"The February daffodils would be unfolding. The renewal date for my car insurance would be passed and we'd be a month nearer vacation."

Our Maitre d', Leslie agreed the plan has some merit, but he wondered whether this wouldn't bring us a month nearer to income tax time too.

"Someone's always taking all the fun out of life," said the man from Craigdarroch.

Poor Life Best Says Rich Rex

NEW YORK (P) — Rex Harrison says he can't understand why he is regarded as sophisticated.

"I don't feel at all suave, velvet or sophisticated," he said, taking a modest sip of pre-luncheon champagne in his hotel suite.

"I'm not sophisticated at all. Otherwise, I wouldn't live on top of a hill and make wine. I'm happiest when I'm living the life of a peasant, which is about the best you can do."

When their careers permit, he and his wife, Rachel Roberts, live the simple life together with five cats and a basset hound named Homer at a small hillside estate at Portofino on the Italian Riviera. There they make wine from their own grapes.

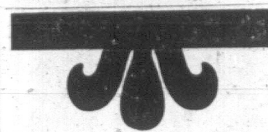

"I make about 12 to 14 demijohns a year," he said. "Right now I've got quite a backlog. I suppose I'll have to get some labels made and flog it to the village."

The 59-year-old actor, as disarming in person as he is charming on the screen, is momentarily at loose ends following the completion of Dr. Doolittle, the animal classic in which he speaks of several species, ranging from a crocodile to a goldfish, in their own tongues.

During the filming of this $20,000,000 epic he became one of the handful of people who have ever taken a ride on a giraffe's back.

"It was done with great care—the animal had to be trained for a year," said Harrison.

Hyde Shatters
Hippie HopesBy AL FORREST
Staff Writer

The classic story of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde is a stern warning to today's drug-oriented culture. The good doctor as portrayed powerfully by Hollywood actor Jack Palance (CBC Wednesday) drank his potion to discover if it would lead him to a finer life.

It couldn't. And it's doubtful if any drug can. Those who have taken casual puffs of marijuana will tell you that, under the influence, common everyday expressions take on great significance. But when the lift is over, nothing is gained.

The statements when read in the cold light of dawn prove to be hum-drum and singularly unextraordinary.

The only thing a person learns through drugs is how to fool himself.

Ah, but back to the Robert Louis Stevenson tale. Dr. Jekyll believes man has two natures—spiritual and animal. He attempts to liberate the good side and inhibit the bad.

But the potion liberates the evil and Dr. Jekyll discovers he rather likes his alter ego Mr. Hyde. He quickly becomes addicted to the fast, wicked, violent life of tavern and back alley.

The end is inevitably disaster as it must be for anyone who turns to drugs.

But the CBC production itself came to a good end. The U.S. network ABC liked it well enough to purchase American rights and is showing it Sunday night at 9 p.m. (Channel 4).

Twice this week we saw Vickie Carr singing her hit song It Must Be Him.

You know the one: "Hello, Hello, it must be him or I shall die."

I thought at first she was trying to get through to her doctor after a New Year's Eve party. But it turns out to be a love song.

If you know "him" tell him to call but don't let anybody else phone her, it's pretty hard on the young girl.

Wojeck was well launched in its new season Tuesday with a thinly-disguised takeoff on Ralph Nader versus the car barons.

The second half of the car safety sermon Swing Low, Sweet Chariot is on at 9 p.m. Tuesday (Channels 2 and 6).

The story is not as devastating as it could be but it left few viewers unaffected. Almost everybody rides in cars.

The show is pretty gutsy and certainly wouldn't have been shown anywhere five years ago.

But the times are a-changing and even TV is growing up.

My TV forecasts for 1968 include:

- Canadian football will be in for trouble with its ratings if it doesn't come up with instant replay and multiple-camera coverage to match the American brand. It's easier to take second-best football if it is getting first-rate display on the screen. Unfortunately, compared with the U.S. effort the Canadian networks are brand X in this department.

- This will be the year The Beatles disappear completely. With their moustaches and far-out gear they have lost touch with the mainstream of young North America.

- The great avalanche of situation comedy shows will rumble into dust before the fall season starts. These things wear thin very quickly. Comedians are more appreciated if they only come around once a month.

- The women of the nation this year will rise up against the growing number of sport programs but they will again be overruled by the masters of the house—the kids.

British Directors
Need a 'U.S. Touch'By RICHARD L. COE
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — These continuing dramatic bundles from Britain often include "original" directors and I'm not convinced this is a reliable idea.

In the case of "Rosenkrantz and Guildenstern" (known locally as "Rosy and Guildy") it was an inspired idea for Derek Goldby to repeat, but I've seen two London imports in a row which would have benefited from greater knowledge of American audiences.

The first is Terence Frisby's farce, "There's A Girl In My Soup," which is luring Gig Young fans to the Music Box, where they have the dividend of discovering Barbara Ferris, the very model of an adorable mod.

MORE CASUAL

The second is a provocative exercise, John Bowen's "After The Rain," which, being satirical about religion, is bound to have troubles finding its audiences at the Golden.

CANADIAN actor Christopher Plummer who co-starred with Julie Andrews in The Sound of Music is being sued for divorce by Patricia Lewis.

Both have been staged by their London mentors and watching them I kept wishing to grab the helm. Old blighty players are far more casual, average folk and far less hectic.

They don't mind a slow start, repeated points and drifting into a finale. Here we want speedy beginnings, and once a point is made are all for getting on with it. If a serious subject is to be treated in comic terms, we need broad reassurances that laughter is permitted.

Mr. Young's frivolous venture suits his finely-honed style, a wordy, aging gourmet whose sophistication is shattered by the breezy honesty of a pert little blonde mini-mod.

But early heavy treatment (Rita Gam in Nita Haldi mood) defers the breezy gusto of that perennial Peter Pan of Alcoholics Anonymous, Mr. Young.

Miss Ferris' cool, truth-speaking entrance alerts the proper style and fortunately she's on a good deal of the evening.

AMUSING

But director Robert Chetwyn would have done all a service by getting the meringue in the air instantly and avoiding some of the heavier pointing he permits in performance.

Finally, there's an amusing performance by Gawn Grainger, a male version of the Ferris character.

Honing "There's A Girl In My Soup" to American tempo would have sharpened this import immensely. While it's an early sell-out, more zip would have assured its future for old-fashioned farce nowadays needs all the camouflage there is.

"After The Rain" presents a less usual hurdle. Nothing gives an American audience the heebie jeebies more certain than public mockery of religion.

Anything may go these days in private, but do not expect those well-heeled enough for a Broadway play to crack a smile about religion unless assured they're supposed to.

MAKING a film based on the controversial novel Candy won't be easy, say the critics, but Swedish actress Ewa Aulin, 17, who has the title role, says she is confident the satire movie will prove box office success. Shooting is under way in Rome. (AP Wirephoto.)

'Clean Your Cockney' Becomes Bad Advice

By GRANVILLE WATTS

LONDON (AP) — Professor Henry Higgins thought he was doing Eliza Doolittle a favor in My Fair Lady when he taught her to clean up her Cockney accent.

But if Eliza would be groomed for stardom today, she couldn't do better than to cash in on that salty London lingo.

"For a Cockney there is no way to go but up," said actor Michael Caine.

Caine, 34-year-old movie star of Alfie and The Ipcress File, now gets $250,000 and upwards for each picture.

Another Cockney actor, Terence Stamp, is not far behind, and Tommy Steele is a Broadway favorite.

On the fashion model front, a Cockney model called Twiggy sets the pace.

Steel, 30, a perky song-and-dance phenomenon, was one of the first to realize that his broad Cockney accent was an advantage. A long string of stage successes in England followed.

RAGS TO RICHES

Caine is typical of the rags-to-riches Cockney success story.

The son of a London charwoman and fish market porter, Caine worked as a freight handler and pneumatic drill operator in the streets before he got his break into acting.

"Cockneys have the strongest sense of survival of any people in the world, and an actor needs that," he said.

Caine came from the same area of London's East End as Stamp 27, who is fiercely proud of his heritage.

"There is a hell of a lot of talent in the working class that never gets anywhere," Stamp said.

"In the last five years there has been a revolution. People like me, we're the moderns. We have no class and no prejudice. We're the new swinging Englishmen. And it's people like me who are spreading the word."

TWIGGY FOUND

Another Cockney, Nigel Davies, met a thin girl called Lesley Hornby working in a London beauty parlor and turned her into Twiggy.

Twiggy, 17, still lives with her parents in their modest North London home.

"Honestly I dunno how much money I've made," she said.

The origin of the word "Cockney" is lost in the mists of time, but is believed to have been invented by

Can Be a Trap

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Why do actors want to direct? In the case of Albert Finney, it's a matter of energy.

"Yes, energy," he insists.

"When I am merely acting in a film, I start getting restless after the fourth or fifth week. Although it does take energy to create and sustain a performance on the screen, you do it in such small pieces that you employ only a very tiny portion of your strength.

"I've tried pushups between scenes; that doesn't work. There is nothing in film acting that gives me the same physical satisfaction that I get in the theatre, where I can get that blessed feeling of exhaustion after performing for 2 hours on stage. By directing a film as well as acting in it, I have an outlet for that energy."

The result of his energetic activity can soon be seen in Charlie Bubbles, in which he directed himself and Liza Minnelli.

RICH MAN

It is the story of a rich man who is captured by his success; something that Finney himself has tried to avoid.

The actor discussed his unorthodox career while in California for locations of The Picasso Summer, a Ray Bradbury fantasy directed by Serge Bourguignon.

Finney came to worldwide fame with his lusty playing of the title role in Tom Jones, the 1963 Academy Award winner. Then he seemed to have backed away from a movie career.

"Right after Tom Jones I filmed Night Must Fall, which no one saw," he recalls.

"Then I did Luther in London and in New York.

After that I decided I wanted to spend a year going around the world. So I did.

WHY TOM JONES

"Many of my friends thought I was crazy. They argued that I should do more films to follow the success of Tom Jones. But I had no desire to follow up a success. I figured that even if I were forgotten, I'd still be able to get a job in a repertory company somewhere and do what I want to do, which is act."

Finney was not forgotten, and he returned to star with Audrey Hepburn in Two For the Road.

BLACK COMEDY

Again he refused to conform to the pattern for stardom. He turned his back on films to join England's National Theatre, appearing in such plays as Much Ado About Nothing and Black Comedy.

Next came Charlie Bubbles, made by his own company for Universal release.

"I really wanted only to direct it, but they insisted that I appear as well," said Finney, 31-year-old son of a Lancashire bookmaker.

Pioneer Roles Good to Him
'Davey Crockett' Rich Man

By GENE HANDSAKER

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Good luck on a brand-new career," reads a telegram thumbtacked to a wall in Fess Parker's dressing room.

Parker's new career? Directing as well as starring in a segment of his Daniel Boone television series.

"I've been involving myself more and more in the writing and production and decided it was time to get my feet wet as a director," drawled television's one-davey Crockett.

Parker, now 43 and a millionaire businessman, is in his fourth year as Boone.

Some stars of long-running series become bored. They "merely deliver the body and leave," he said.

BETTER BITE

"I'd like to continue as an actor the rest of my life, but I think these other things give me a better bite into my craft."

Six-foot-six Fess Elisha Parker Jr. has been finding new vistas ever since he came out of the University of Texas to spark a fanatical hero worship among small fry in 1955-56 as Davy Crockett, king of the wild frontier.

Parker tried to escape the frontier image with Mr. Smith Goes to Washington, 26 television episodes he now says "weren't too good."

"When I finally matured in this business I realized I should maximize my wonderful opportunity."

The maximizer of new vistas is a songwriter and recording star who has written a movie script that three major studios are considering. His company, Fess Parker Enterprises, Inc., is developing three movie properties and has a TV series well along in the planning.

BUCKSKINS AND BOOTS His television and off-screen images hardly could be different. After a 10 or 12-hour work day, Parker changes from buckskins and boots to sports clothes from a $6,000 wardrobe that includes $250 suits and $30 shirts.

A pilot licensed to fly multi-engine planes, Parker plans to commute 100 miles by helicopter to the $400,000 Spanish adobe he's building on 16 beach-front acres at Santa Barbara, Calif.

That city is where he owns a 338-unit mobile home park and plans to build another. He's on the board of regents of Santa Clara University.

For relaxation he sails a 32-foot yacht and thumps a dressing room piano.

NEGROES IN SHOW BUSINESS

Roll Call Hints of Glorious Black Future

BLACK MAGIC: A Pictorial History of the Negro in American Entertainment, by Langston Hughes and Milton Meizer. Prentice-Hall of Canada, 1967. $11.95.

Reviewed by Ann Saddlemyer

A lavish encyclopedia of Negro American entertainers, fully documented and completely illustrated, Black Magic traces the exciting history of the Negro's contribution to the arts of the New World from the primitive big beat brought by the slave ships two centuries ago to the latest Motown Record by the Supremes.

Lovingly, almost at times too indiscriminately, the two compilers, one an authority on American literature, the other a fine Negro writer, have culled their material from the records and files of museums, libraries, newspapers, recording companies and music publishing houses throughout the United States. The photographs alone supply source material for countless studies of musical and theatrical

Let Her Sing,
Let Her Play,
Let Her Entertain Us...

history. Diaries and private memoirs have been explored, personal memories exploited.

The Negro stage character is traced from the early days of Uncle Tom and handkerchief-dialect (still occasionally with us) to the astonishing revelations of LeRoi Jones and the sensitive portrayals of the late Lorraine Hansbury.

We follow the early minstrels through their metamorphoses into the superb showmanship of a Sammy Davis or a Josephine Baker. (Two years ago, with Civil Rights in a Cracker Barrel, San Francisco audiences were reintroduced to the original art form.)

We have all been fortunate enough to have heard Marian Anderson and Leontyne Price; here we are reminded of "The Black Swan", Elizabeth Taylor Greenfield, born a slave in 1859, called upon by Queen Victoria to perform at Buckingham Palace in 1853.

In the same year a New York Theatre liberally allowed a Jim Crow section in the gallery for a performance of Uncle Tom's Cabin, the play which was to give Sam Lucas the Hollywood fame reserved today for another Negro actor, Sidney Poitier.

Exciting experiments with Negro actors, from the first black Othello, James Hewlett, in 1821, are recorded alongside the work of the splendid Karamu Theatre of today, training ground for many authors, actors, and technicians who might never otherwise receive an opportunity.

And we trace the development of the modern Negro musical from its beginnings in the early "coon shows" where for the first time it was considered unnecessary for Negro entertainers to perform in the exaggerated blackface make-up popularized by the white minstrels.

Inevitably, in a work so intensely dedicated to the preservation and celebration of the achievements of a race, there is an imbalance, a lack of proportion, and an awkwardness and repetitiousness of style.

Innumerable pages are devoted to the also-rans, while many of the greatest American entertainers — Louis Armstrong, Adelaide Addison, Mahalia Jackson, Ella Fitzgerald, Ethel Waters, Fats Waller — are given comparatively little space.

The work of James Baldwin is taken for granted. Perhaps this is because eventually in the arts, genius is recognized and accepted; such names belong on all rosters.

Yet surely this is the weakness of ethnic surveys in general: the final honest appraisal must be of performance, without regard for color, creed or profession.

What does become obvious throughout the book — and here the authors have been remarkably circumspect — is the final dishonesty of the audience.

distortions of the truth on which those techniques were founded; that can make the establishment of a Negro theatre in New York impossible, suffocates the world of the theatre and denies its own responsibilities as an audience.

... But-After That,
Mr. Hotelman,
Turn Her Out Into the Cold

Small wonder that the problem play too often slips into a documentary, that creativity is stifled, that the performers themselves weaken their position by arguing over the rights of ethnic versus integrated theatres where there should be natural growth for both, that the wonderful broad, ironic humor of the Negro race can twist into the horrors of black comedy.

"Where else," asks comedian Dick Gregory at his gilded microphone, "would I have to ride on the back of the bus, have a choice of going to the worst schools, eating in the worst restaurants, living in the worst neighborhoods — and yet average $5,000 now just talking about it?"

Black Magic records how it all happened.

Little Interest In Her Friends

LOVE AND WORK ENOUGH, by Clara Thomas. University of Toronto Press, 1967. $6.50.

Reviewed by
C. L. Lamberton

Love and Work Enough is the first full-length biography of Ann Jameson, author of a number of books celebrated in their time, the mid-nineteenth century, but now little read — works such as Visits and Sketches at Home and Abroad (chiefly a series of impressions of German culture), Characteristics of Women (studies of Shakespeare's heroines), and a six-volume History of Sacred and Legendary Art.

One supposes that the biography of Mrs. Jameson appeared in our centennial year because she was also the author of Winter Studies and Summer Rambles in Canada.

The biography, which has all the appurtenances of a scholarly work, is somewhat disappointing.

One does not expect Anna Jameson to be miraculously metamorphosed into a literary figure of lasting importance, but one has every right to expect her and her friends to be presented as the interesting people they were.

The general reader knows something of major literary figures.

He is less likely to know much about the sprats which swim along with the whales, and a biographer does well to remember that one of his functions is to remove the tarnish of time from people now relatively or even utterly unknown and to remind us that they were once living parts of the fabric of their time.

In Love and Work Enough, few minor characters become more than mere names. To give but one example, Samuel Rogers is mentioned as a giver of breakfasts, some of which Anna Jameson attended. Now it is true that this favorite of the bluestockings entertained literally everyone of importance who lived in London or who came to London; but it is also true that he was known for his exquisite taste, his caustic wit, and for his corpse-like appearance. Yet he fails to emerge as a personality, as do Joanna Baillie, Sarah Siddons, Thomas Norton Longman, and many others.

Of the three most interesting chapters of the book, two have to do with travelling and living in Upper Canada, where Anna Jameson's husband was Vice-Chancellor of the Court of Chancery.

A third chapter deals with Mrs. Jameson's friendship with Lady Byron, who after her divorce had numerous confidantes although none of them ever divulged the cause of the marital discord.

Miss Thomas, who has been lucky enough to have had access to the Lovelace papers, a favor very sparingly accorded, shed no light upon the nature of Byron's naughtiness.

It is quite possible that Lady Byron felt that it was not in good taste to commit her accusations to paper, preferring to whisper them to her friends. One feels, however, that the matter is of sufficient interest to deserve some mention — perhaps even a brief discussion.

Pup Tale Not A Pip

MURPHY, by Kurt Unkelbach. Prentice-Hall of Canada, 1967. $4.75.

Reviewed by Susan Vallance

The author of this book is a breeder of Labrador Retrievers, and his knowledge of the ways of dogs is apparent in this account of the adventures of a group of pack-dogs and their follower, a beagle called Murphy.

The book deals with the efforts of a thirteen-year-old boy to capture the stray beagle and keep him as a pet.

The story is told from the point of view of various characters who come in contact with Murphy — the boy, the pack-leader, and many more.

Some of them are vividly drawn, but the rapid shifts of angle of vision lead to confusion and to the absence of any real identity in the beagle.

Unfortunately, Kurt Unkelbach has created a series of superficial incidents rather than, as the jacket states, "the ageless story of a boy's love for a dog."

Murphy is on sale in children's bookstores, presumably for children in their early teens, but I would hesitate to recommend it.

The author appears to have assembled an assortment of stock situations in the hope of appealing to adults as well as children.

A book which stresses a mother's worry because her son has not started dating at thirteen, and which includes a Supreme Court Judge "bending" the law, is hardly suitable for young readers.

Kurt Unkelbach's sentimental vision makes Murphy more suitable for soap-opera adults than clear-headed children.

RICKENBACKER: AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY, by Edward V. Rickenbacker. Prentice-Hall, 1967.

Reviewed by Grant McOrmond

Eddie Rickenbacker's autobiography has been on the best seller list for some weeks. Its presence there raises questions about the literary taste of the American public.

It is, as one might expect, a very handsome book.

The dust cover reproduces an oil painting of the young Rickenbacker, in his personally designed, custom-tailored Captain's uniform of World War I, against a background of aerial combat complete with a plummeting German aircraft.

The stern craggy face of the man is barely relieved by the cold blue of the war torn sky reflected in his eyes, and is reinforced by the rocky outcrop on which he sits, carelessly indifferent to the violence all about him.

When the reader opens the work, he is once more assailed by the feeling that here is a man telling the story of his life with a casual lack of involvement with the real issues of his time and an egocentric indifference to the realities of his own character.

Rickenbacker depicts himself as a twentieth century Horatio Alger hero. His aims are simple: the acquisition of wealth and power.

His means are an understanding of machinery and of its potentialities, particularly of the automobile and the aeroplane; a tremendous volume of sheer physical courage, combined with a steely will and fantastic good luck; a penchant for getting to know the right people; and finally, a determination to succeed.

The story of Eddie Rickenbacker, racing driver, owner of the Indianapolis Speedway, American Ace of Aces in World War I, automobile manufacturer, and owner of

... old days good

Eastern Air Lines, is also the story of the rise of American technology, of the triumph of the gasoline engine.

But Rickenbacker is not content to describe his ascent from rags to riches.

As in politics he espouses the cause of the Goldwater arm of the Republican party, so in writing he advances his reactionary ideas, that "foreign aid ... would do more harm than good," that the only solution to the threat of communism is to be found in "the old-fashioned, American formula of hard work."

He predicts a century or more of racial rather than of ideological conflict, except, of course, in the United States, where "people of color will remain loyal to their mother country."

Rickenbacker concludes his autobiography with a stirring denunciation of the democratic welfare state where "self-government ultimately generates disintegrating forces." It is America's manifest destiny to save the world through a faith in God, hard work, and the rediscovery of "the principles of the American way of life that have been tried and proved."

It is not every man who can borrow three and a half million dollars to buy an airline.

It is not every man who can maintain the narrow moral and political rigidity of nineteenth century capitalism so far into the twentieth century. The spectacle of its continuation frankly exposed may come as an unpleasant shock.

HUNT FOR TRUTH IN THE TAVERN

PILGRIM THE DEATH, by Bernard Epps. Macmillan of Canada, $4.95.

This is a kind of Quebecois Under Milk Wood. It relates episodes during a year in the mountain village of Stormaway, whose denizens are bawdy, raucous and vibrant. The central figure is Dougal, the village schoolmaster, burdened with a narrow, cold wife.

While she stays glued to the television set, Dougal roams the countryside or comes roaring home from the tavern on Saturday nights in his confused search for a philosophy of life.

The book's philosophy is live. One should presumably "storm away" at life.

The novel begins sparklingly with a comic prologue in which "Moanin' Joe," the itinerant hell-fire preacher (also known as "the Sin-Screamer") visits the village with a coffin loaded on his back — a box which acts as his house and as his platform from which to shout his messages of doom:

The preacher and his coffin are swept away on the river, and for about half the book the reader is also carried along by the energetic torrent of life in Stormaway.

Then the pace flags somewhat. No single character is sufficiently interesting, and the episodic structure becomes merely repetitive.

However, parts of the book are splendid. There are some extended sequences which are quite beautiful prose poems, comic celebrations of life. All in all, this is a first novel of some distinction and represents something new on the Canadian scene.

Cloak and Dagger Plots Recounted

THAT DENMARK MIGHT LIVE, by Irving Westein; Ryerson Press; $4.35.

Reviewed by A. E. LOFT
That Denmark Might Live reconstructs the days of the Danish Resistance in a series of exciting vignettes that simply stagger the imagination.

The "cloak and dagger" plots of the guerrillas and the methods used to execute these objectives are almost unbelievable.

Nazi intelligence centres, war factories, and air bases were blown up.

Practically the entire Jewish population was evacuated safely, and during the last days of the war the Resistance Movement was able to block the German retreat out of Denmark. In the words of Field Marshal Montgomery, the Danish Resistance "was worth 10 divisions."

Apart from a few collaborationists the entire nation had united against the hated Nazis, despite the fact that for the first time the Germans had refrained from using violence in taking over a foreign country. In the early years of the war the Danes were treated decently by their "protectors," only to be repaid by disrespect and humiliation.

On May 2, 1945, the Germans received orders to capitulate, but in Denmark there was "not a single Allied soldier present to accept the German surrender."

To further complicate the situation there was no legal authority in Denmark as "the King had withdrawn from all official duties, his ministers had resigned, parliament was dissolved." It was not until May 5, when British troops arrived, that the Germans formally surrendered.

The purpose of this book as stated by the author is "to illuminate a period of history and bring it alive for my young readers." In achieving this objective he was highly successful. Though written for that age group to whom the Second World War seems ancient history it will prove fascinating to all who remember those dreadful years.

VICE-REGAL STUDY LACKING IN DEPTH

THEY GAVE ROYAL ASSENT, by D. A. McGregor; Mitchell Press Ltd., Vancouver, B.C.; $5.50.

This little book has endeavored to show the contributions made by the 25 governors and lieutenant-governors to the history of Vancouver Island and British Columbia from 1849 to 1967. For the most part the author has been unsuccessful.

They Gave Royal Assent leaves one wondering how some vice-regents ever attained such high office. Surely they must have done something to justify their appointments.

Mr. McGregor is to be congratulated upon assembling, for the first time, a record of British Columbia's vice-regal representatives, but his book lacks the depth and color necessary to make his subjects live. — A. E.

Some French experts bravely play down the consequences to their country of a U.S. investment stoppage. And Johnson's attempted discouragement of foreign travel by U.S. fund-seekers aroused little public alarm among tourism authorities in France.

Nevertheless, predictions are that the dollar dry-up may worsen the French balance of payments, cut capital investments within France and weaken the country at the very moment when industrial competition from other Common Market members is mounting.

BUSINESS VIEWS

Ultra-Modern Car Premises To Open Soon

By AB KENT
Business Editor

One of the most modern—and certainly Victoria's most impressive—automobile dealerships is due to come on stream March 1.

This is the architecturally pleasing Empress Pontiac Buick Ltd. under construction on North Douglas where Green Lumber recently stood.

A fellow of the Metallurgical Society of AIME, Mr. McNaughton was the institute's president in 1961.

Unlike some other businesses that do both over-the-counter and mail-order merchandising, Simpsons-Sears actively promote both from a single location.

This interesting aspect of the retail trade was underlined by J. C. Barrow, chairman of the department store chain, which next year will be out to capture its share of the Victoria market for the first time.

Simpsons-Sears mail order business is well established in Victoria and shows gains consistently.

When the new store is opened at Hillside Shopping Centre complex, it will have a prominent mail order office, not played down to give the best possible enhancement to the counter trade.

As Mr. Barrow explains, Simpsons-Sears find the two facets of the business are "married to each other." The company has found that when a retail store is opened in a centre served previously by mail order office, the volume of mail orders increases.

Asked to comment on a rival's estimate that in order to make a go of the new project Simpsons-Sears will have to do a minimum of $6 million net in its first year of operation, Mr. Barrow said: "A good guess—maybe a bit low."

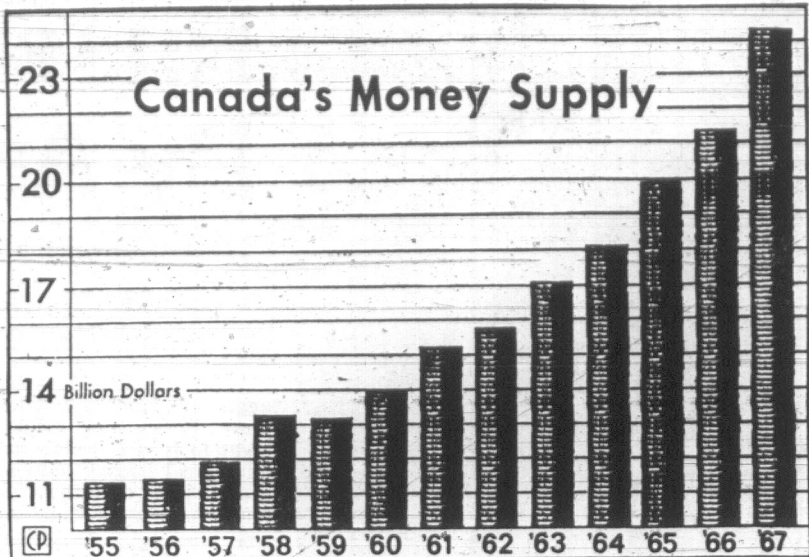

But he said projections of market prepared by the company would have to remain confidential.

Meanwhile the Simpsons-Sears warehouse will be rushed to completion in Saanich to provide both a distribution centre for the existing mail order operation and a base for the finishing work that will follow the main part of store construction.

Note to Inco-News, a magazine of new technical and industrial items published by International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd.: The American vessel Victoria has not yet been seen in this area despite your announcement that it is in regular service between here and Seattle.

This was the hydrofoil ferry constructed using high-strength nickel-steel components, to provide a fast new link across the International Boundary.

But we'll welcome it, gas turbines and all, should its trials ever prove out.

Imperial-Commerce Tops

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce has passed the Royal Bank of Canada for the first time in their battle to show the highest assets in the country's banking system.

The Canada Gazette today showed assets of the Canadian Imperial as $7,610,018,000 on Nov. 30. The Royal Bank's assets were $7,538,996,000.

The struggle has been under way since formation of Canadian Imperial from a merger of the Canadian Bank of Commerce and Imperial Bank of Canada 6½ years ago.

A victory would have been more rewarding to Canadian Imperial a month earlier, when the banks ended their financial year.

At that time Royal Bank assets were $7,779,659,000, Canadian Imperial assets $7,481,582,000, and the former still could tell its shareholders in year end financial statements it was No. 1.

The order of ranking for Canada's six other chartered banks was unchanged at Nov. 30.

Their assets:
Bank of Montreal $6,162,530,000; Bank of Nova Scotia $4,158,528,000; Toronto-Dominion Bank $3,518,512,000; Banque Canadienne Nationale $1,229,941,000; La Banque Provinciale du Canada $622,365,000; Mercantile Bank of Canada $203,004,000.

Mercantile reduced its assets by about $25,000,000 in 1967 to conform to a clause of the New Bank Act.

The bank is wholly-owned by First National City Bank of New York.

Northwest U.S. Needs Natural Gas

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Federal Power Commission indicated Friday it will move as speedily as it can to hear an emergency plan for getting more natural gas into the Pacific Northwest this winter.

El Paso Natural Gas Co. of El Paso, Tex., has applied to "borrow" Canadian gas imported via Pacific Gas Transmission Co., a subsidiary of the Pacific Gas and Electric Co. of San Francisco. It would make repayment later from its own reserves.

The case has implications for the Canada-U.S. gas trade, now somewhat clouded by recent actions of the regulatory boards in both countries.

ONE BARRIER

Ironically, a plan by El Paso to import more western Canada gas from Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. of Vancouver is one barrier, with the price to be charged the point of dissent.

El Paso wants an additional 75,000,000 cubic feet daily from Pacific Gas up to May 1. Then it would return the gas at a ratio of 3 to 2—or 150 per cent of what it takes from Pacific Gas between May 1 and Nov. 1.

One aspect is the recent reservation sounded by the National Energy Board of Canada in rejecting the Westcoast export price laid down by the power commission.

The board warned against undue siphoning off to other areas of Canadian exports authorized for specific U.S. markets.

Cunard Liner Will Become Floating Hotel

LONDON (AP) — The 34,172-ton Cunard liner Caronia, Britain's fifth-largest passenger ship, is being sold for more than £1,000,000 ($2,570,000) to Yugoslavia for use as a floating hotel.

Negotiations for the deal are expected to be concluded soon, a Cunard spokesman said.

The liner is expected to become a floating hotel off Dubrovnik to help Yugoslavia's growing tourist industry.

The 20-year-old luxury liner was designed to carry 863 passengers on cruises and the North Atlantic run.

IT'S MY VIEW . . .

By Ernie Fedoruk

Bill Wakeham, who was good enough to win the Ontario Open championship last summer, isn't qualified to play in Sunday's third and final round of the Victoria and District Golf Committee's fall medal series.

Also the winner of the B.C. assistants' title and a worthy representative of Canada in his amateur days, the Gorge Vale swinger is being barred from participation in a district tournament that, for more than a decade, has been unnoticed by anyone but a handful of Victoria-area players.

All of a sudden, the medal series seems as important as any major stop on golf's gold trail. Before, it was simply a get-together for the local family, at a time of year when competition is in the ultra-quiet stage.

The signing and fall medal series were instigated by and for amateurs. Basically, it is still an amateur tournament, operating under the jurisdiction of the District Committee. Professionals were invited along later.

Technically, Wakeham's situation is confusing. First assured there is no impending war between the amateurs and the professionals, although one or two bigoted nays might like to see it. The worst of it all has been a complete lack of understanding because of Wakeham's desire to keep broad and butter on his family's table. The understanding is compounded because the pros have discovered rules and regulations and are ready to start enforcing them in all areas.

Last spring, the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association granted Wakeham a "B1 assistant" membership. He was listed as Gorge Vale's playing pro and the card permitted Wakeham to participate in all tournaments as a bona fide CPGA member.

In September, he obtained employment with Victoria Cablevision. That ended his association from a professional standpoint—with Gorge Vale and the CPGA but guaranteed Wakeham his bread and butter for the winter months.

His CPGA card was withdrawn from Wakeham on Dec. 14 since he was "no longer employed by a class 'A' professional."

In fact, the card should have been returned in September. Before he turned in his card, Wakeham participated in the first two rounds of the medal series. After 36 holes, he held a two-stroke lead over Ron MacLeod and was four shots ahead of Vaughan Trapp of Victoria Golf Club.

Under CPGA regulations, card-holding pros such as Trapp and MacLeod stand to lose their membership if they play with an "unregistered pro"—which is what Wakeham happens to be at the moment.

There are some aspects of the card-lifting procedure that I can readily appreciate. Ron Fitch of Vancouver's Gleneagles club, a CPGA director, said Friday "it is a normal procedure. The card is void when an assistant member no longer works for a class 'A' professional."

Fair enough. What about assistant professionals on the Pfairies, where the snow is hip-deep and the temperature around unpeeped degrees below zero?

"There is a 'winter layoff' rule." Apparently, there is no "winter layoff" regulation in force on Vancouver Island, where golf can be played 12 months a year.

Fitch also explained that Wakeham was not the only assistant who had to return his card to the B.C. branch of the PGA. Vancouver's Doug Robb also was asked to turn in his.

"If Bill wants to play," added Fitch, "our advice to him would be to seek a reclassification. He knows the procedure."

It was explained to Fitch that Wakeham still remains "a member in good standing" of Gorge Vale. Could he not play in the medal series as a golfer without any standing?

"That hasn't been put to me," said the Gleneagles pro. "Offhand . . . and I'm just guessing . . . I don't see why he can't, if the amateur people in Victoria will allow him."

"Our only interest in any golfer is as a professional." "If he says he isn't a professional (and does not accept prize money), then we have no jurisdiction over him. I'd say it would be up to the amateurs to approve his entry."

The ball has been tossed back to the District Committee, and there has been no word from Wakeham if he intends to play at Colwood on Sunday.

The sorest point of all is the fact that Wakeham's card was dated from April, 1967, to April, 1968. Yet, according to Fitch, any card can be picked up if an assistant decides to pack it up after a week's work.

There are valid reasons for that regulation, but it does seem a harsh rule to put out recall orders in the winter season. Even Wakeham doesn't know his plans for the next season. He's being penalized because of that doubt.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Lamar Lundy, the dean of Los Angeles Rams with 11 years service, said today he was glad when George Allen came and took over the club.

"He didn't say he came to Los Angeles to build," said the defensive end. "He told us he came to win right now. That is what I wanted to hear. I'm not going to be around forever."

Allen's first squad won eight of 14 in 1966 to record the first winning season in Los Angeles since 1958, but Allen still isn't satisfied.

"We'd hoped to be here for the Super Bowl," said Allen as the Rams prepared to meet the Cleveland Browns in the annual National Football League Play-off Bowl in the Orange Bowl Sunday.

Lundy—part of the Bearsome Foursome which includes Deacon Jones, Roger Brown and Merlin Olsen—played for the Rams under coaches Sid Gillman, Bob Waterfield and Harland Svare.

He says it was Allen's approach to the club that made the Rams start turning in winning performances.

"Suddenly, under Allen, we began to look around," said Lundy. "We discovered we had become unselfish players, pulling together."

Former Champs Avoid Opening-Round Upsets

Two former provincial champions avoided upsets and two skips collected points at a merry pace Friday as opening shots were fired at Victoria Curling Club in the South Vancouver Island men's curling playdowns.

Tony Gutoski of the host club and Duncan's Glen Harper were the two ex-champs who got away on the right foot in the double-knockout competition.

Gutoski overcame some early troubles before chalking up a 10-5 triumph over Duncan skip Vern Kaspick. Trailing 3-0 after two ends and facing a 4-2 deficit after five, Gutoski counted four on the sixth when Kaspick was heavy on an attempted draw with last rock.

Tony was in command the rest of the way, stealing one on the ninth and two on the 10th.

BREEZE FOR HARPER

It was an easier trip for Harper, who scored singles on each of the first four ends and collected four on the seventh en route to a 10-4 triumph over Sam Snobelen and his quartet from Allan's Curling Club.

Jim Gallagher of Allan's and Lloyd Larson of the Victoria club were the skips who piled up points. Gallagher trimmed Esquimalt's Jim Sawyer 19-5 while Larson laced the Racquet Club foursome of R. Young 15-6.

In other games, Gordie Moore defeated Harry Gulka 11-8, Maurice Tellier squeezed past Pat Hearn 8-6, Harvey Thompson nipped Bob Gallagher 8-7, and Gar Taylor topped Jack Glover 10-3.

Play continues today and Sunday with games at Victoria, Esquimalt and Allan's ice surfaces. Four rinks from a starting field of 34 will qualify for the Island final at Nanaimo later this month.

Goalies Stand Out For Gulls, Totems

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Goalkeepers played major roles in Friday's two Western Hockey League games.

At San Diego, the Phoenix Roadrunners peppered net-minder Dave Kelly with 37 shots but still ended on the wrong end of a 7-2 score against the Gulls.

At Vancouver, the Canucks shelled veteran Don Head of Seattle Totems with 38 shots but could manage no more than a 5-5 overtime tie.

San Diego also generated firepower, and made it pay. Len Ronson scored three goals to take over the WHL lead with 20. Fred Hites chipped in with a pair and Ross Perkins and Warren Hynes had singles. Ronson drew two assists for a five-point night before 10,319 delighted fans.

Dick Lamoureux and Brian Smith countered for the last-place Roadrunners.

First-place Seattle forced the tie at Vancouver with two goals late in the third period by Don Chiz. Singles were added by Marc Boileau, Earl Heiskala and Ray Larose.

Head also drew an assist and a penalty during a busy evening.

Gord Vejpava with two goals Mike Corbett, Danny Belisle and Bruce Carmichael scored for Vancouver. The game drew 2,760 fans.

Russians Jolted By Arne's Advice

Fans' Support Helps to Inspire Upset by Swedes

WINNIPEG (CP) — An aggressive band of Swedes upset Russia 6-4 Friday night to turn Canada's international hockey tournament into a centennial rerun.

In becoming giant killers, Sweden made the current double round-robin affair almost a carbon copy of last January's centennial invitational tournament here, which Canada won with a dramatic 5-4 final-game triumph over the Soviet Union.

It's Canada vs. Russia again at 6:30 p.m. PST tonight in an identical situation. Canada has to win to become the tournament champion.

The game is being telecast nationally by the CTV network starting at 7 p.m. PST.

Sweden's unexpected victory brought the Canadians back into the picture after Russia, world champions for the last five years, had pushed them into the background with a 5-1 win Wednesday night.

HIT HARDER

"I told them to hit more," said Swedish coach Arne Stromberg. "And they did, more than they have in a long time."

In checking the Russians to a near standstill, Sweden took the role Czechoslovakia played in 1967 with a 5-3 upset of the Soviet machine.

"They played well and deserved to win," said Russian coach Anatoli Tchernisov, who ticked off poor goaltending and defence for his club's failure.

Tord Lundstrom and Bert-Ola Nordlander each scored two goals for Sweden, which lost 3-2 and 5-4 to Canada. Hakan Nygren and Arne Johansson got one goal each.

Victor Polupanov got two Soviet goals, with Vladimir Vikulov and Vieniamin Alexandrov getting singles.

After trailing 2-0 in the first period and 4-2 in the second, the Russians pulled to within, one goal late in the third period but defenceman Alexander Ragulin blew the last chance for a draw when he fumbled the puck in front of his own net. Lundstrom banged it in to put the game away before 6,200 happy fans.

CROWD HELPS

"The crowd being on our side was a big lift," Stromberg said. "It was better than the support we get in Sweden," he said with a chuckle.

Tchernisov said the crowd's partisan support was just a warmup. "It will be even more so against us tonight."

The Swedes were in complete control in the first period but their confidence was shaken a little when Polupanov flipped in the first Russian goal off goaltender Leif Holmqvist's forehead early in the second period.

Cut and dazed, Holmqvist had to leave the game and was replaced by young Christer Ambramsson, who came through under pressure to help Sweden stay two goals head, Holmqvist returned for the third period.

Sweden also lost defenceman Bjorn Palmqvist in the first period with a possible broken ankle.

The Swedish performance was full of tips for Canadian coach Jackie McLeod, who watched the game in his continuing efforts to solve the Soviet puzzle.

In clashes between national teams since 1963, Russia has won 18 times, lost three and tied two against Canada.

TO VACATE CELLAR

Cougars Must Tame Broncos

Beat the best to bounce out of the basement. That doesn't sound like an easy chore, but it is what Victoria Cougars must do at Memorial Arena tonight in order to climb out of the B.C. Junior Hockey League cellar.

Cougars found themselves all alone in last place this morning after Kelowna Buckaroos had made about 1,000 hometown fans happier Friday night by lacing the third-place Vernon Essos 9-5.

It was the fifth game without defeat for the Cougars and it lifted them one point ahead of the Cougars. During the streak, Kelowna had won four times and played to a tie with Victoria.

Goaltender Brett Kneen continued his standout play for the Cougars, turning aside 50 shots, including 25 in the opening period when his club somehow managed to grab a 2-1 lead, which Kelowna turned into a 4-1 margin early in the second session.

CARR SETS PACE

Gene Carr was another bright Buckaroo. Carr made it a five-point night by scoring three times and assisting on two goals.

Needing a win tonight to get back into fifth place, the Cougars take on the league-leading Penticton Broncos at 8:30 in a game the Cats must win to keep alive their flickering playoff hopes.

Broncos, who have won 19 of 24 games, are solidly settled in first place, riding eight points in front of Kamloops Rockets, who entertain New Westminster Royals in tonight's other league game.

Next games: Today — New Westminster at Kamloops; Penticton at Victoria.

SOCCER LEAGUE ADOPTS NORTH AMERICAN TITLE

NEW YORK (CP) — The new soccer league, which Thursday was christened the Professional Soccer League, Friday changed its name to the North American Soccer League.

Directors of the league, formed out of a merger between the United Soccer Association and the National Professional Soccer League, said they reconsidered their decision of 24 hours earlier and finally agreed on the new name.

They also agreed, in the final session of a two-day meeting, that the league will operate as two divisions, with a 32-game interlocking schedule to commence March 31 or April 1.

The league will be divided into east and west divisions on a geographic basis without regard to previous league affiliations.

Teams in the Eastern Division will be: Toronto, Atlanta, Baltimore, Boston, Cleveland, Detroit, New York, Washington and the Boston team of the old USA to be relocated in another city. Teams in the Western Division are: Vancouver, Chicago, Dallas, Houston, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Oakland, Calif., St. Louis, and the second Los Angeles team, also to be relocated.

Nanaimo Girls Display Power

Nanaimo looked like the team to beat as play in an invitational girls' high school basketball tournament opened Friday at Oak Bay High.

The Nanaimo girls staged an impressive shooting display as they turned on the power to whip Victoria High 53-26.

Claremont was clouted 33-19 by Courtenay and Oak Bay as the only local team to collect a victory in the six-team "tournament," defeating Delbrook of Vancouver 29-20.

Laurie Sawden scored 10 of her 15 points in the opening half to help Nanaimo to a 27-15 lead at the intermission and the Hub City club continued to control play through the second half.

Lynn Stephens added 11 points for Nanaimo and Pat Bourne potted 11 for the Vics.

STRONG DEFENCE

Courtenay produced an unexpected strong defence against Claremont and a pair of scoring aces in Heather and Rose Witzel, who combined for 26 points, with Heather hitting for 16.

Courtenay dominated the boards most of the way and checked with determination, yielding only six points each to Claremont leaders Jeannie McHattie and Trish Spooner.

Oak Bay also exhibited defensive strength with Lynette Goff and Jacquie Farris playing major roles in containing Delbrook snipers. Miss Goff also contributed 12 points to the Oak Bay attack.

Play continued this morning and the big game of the tournament may be the meeting between Nanaimo and Oak Bay at 6:30 tonight. Delbrook and Claremont clash at 8.

Oak Bay (25) — M. Robertson 2, N. Harwood 4, MacMillan 2, M. Wills 6, C. Van Shaik 2, L. Goff 12, J. Farris 3, D. Cooke, J. MacKenzie.

Delbrook (20) — H. Haigne, P. McGuire 3, J. Currie 3, G. Weimar 4, W. Wimbles 4, C. Carter, L. Beale 1, J. Carabell 2, A. Smith 2, J. MacSweeney, M. Carey 2.

Courtenay (33) — L. Goodsell, D. Schell, L. Rowland, R. Witzel 9, B. Barnes, P. Allen 4, V. Moore, W. Richardson, H. Witzel 16, D. Richardson 4.

Claremont (19) — C. Sandwith, T. Salt, D. Benn 3, B. Brackenbury, J. Farrell, E. Lax, J. McHattie 6, T. Spooner 6, L. Alkinson 2.

Hulme injured in car pileup

AUCKLAND (CP) — World champion Denis Hulme and Maurice Brownlie, both of New Zealand, were injured in a crash with five laps to go early today in the New Zealand Grand Prix.

Chris Amon of New Zealand won the race, driving a Ferrari, but neither Hulme nor Brownlie were around to watch the finish.

Hulme was reported in hospital with a concussion while Brownlie was treated for cuts. Hulme was expected to be released Sunday.

Unofficial placings gave second place to Frank Gardner of Australia in a Brabham Alfa Romeo and third place to Piers Courage of Britain in a McLaren-Cosworth.

An eyewitness to the spectacular crash said Brownlie apparently moved out to let Hulme through, but moved back too soon with the result that Hulme's Ferrari went right over the car Brownlie was driving.

Hulme's machine rolled several times and ended upside down while Brownlie's car lost its wheels.

Punch at Start Helped Vikings

University of Victoria Vikings came out swinging at Esquimalt Sports Centre Friday night and used their early scoring punch to retain their grasp on first place in the Vancouver Island Hockey League.

Vikings pounded out a 2-0 lead in the opening period and that was their margin of victory as they turned back Tudor Monarchs 6-3.

Defeat dropped the Tudors out of a second-place deadlock with Stockers North Americans, who remained two points behind the Uvic crew with a 6-4 decision over Queen's Own Rifles.

MYERS SCORES TWO

Stickers can thank a second-period scoring spree for their triumph. They collected four goals, two of them by Larry Myers, as they drilled 19 shots at the Queen's Own cage and outscored the Rifles 3-1 in the middle session.

Mick Brown fired two tallies for the Rifles.

Ted Sarkissian sparked the Viking attack, scoring in the first and third periods.

Fights marked both games with two major penalties and a game misconduct being handed out in the third period of the Vikings-Tudors tussle and Ken Walz of Stockers and Duke Hurford of Rifles collecting majors in the middle period of the other game.

ABOUT OPENS

Yanks Ready For Question

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — A former U.S. Lawn Tennis Association president says America will decide next month whether to follow Britain's lead in erasing lines between amateur and professional tennis.

Ed Turville, an executive committee member of the association, said the amateur group will vote on a list of proposals Feb. 3 at an annual meeting in Coronado, Calif.

The proposals include:
● Abolition of the distinction of players between amateur and professional.

● Inclusion of some administrative body for pro tennis within the association.

Turville predicted: "We definitely will have some form of open tennis this year."

Pair of Wingers Lost to Detroit

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Red Wings learned Friday their National Hockey League 9-3 romp over Oakland Thursday night was costly as two right wingers went on the injured list.

Floyd Smith was sidelined with a broken bone in his right foot and will miss tonight's game at Chicago and a Sunday clash in Detroit against Montreal.

Doug Roberts suffered a bad bruise above the left ankle when hit by a third-period shot. Ron Anderson of the Wings' Fort Worth farm club was recalled to bolster the squad.

Lions Undefeated But Scots Set Pace

Red Lion Inn is the only undefeated team in the Victoria and District Soccer League's first division.

That impressive record might be expected to be enough to have the Lions romping in first place, but it isn't so. Canadian Scottish is leading the pack while the Lions are forced to share second place with Victoria West.

While they haven't been losing to anybody, the Lions haven't been beating many people. They have five ties and three victories in their eight league starts for a total of 11 points. The Scots have collected six triumphs and one draw while losing once for their 13-point total and the Wests have five wins and a tie in their eight starts.

Lions get a chance to share the top berth Sunday when they tangle with the Scots at Central Park while Wests will go against Luckies at Heywood Avenue.

All matches start at 2 p.m. Sunday. Fixtures are listed in the Sports Menu on Page 12.

"Packers just scored... Pass it on."

Just an Idea, Or Job Plea?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hockey Hall of Fame member Walter (Babe) Pratt says professional hockey teams should hire two or three coaches, similar to football clubs.

"Why not have a guy to look after defencemen, and another for forwards?" suggested Pratt, a former star defenceman in the National Hockey League.

Pratt said hockey makes more money than football, so why not more coaches?

He made the comment while criticizing hockey at the amateur level, noting that the Russians are becoming better hockey players than Canadians.

"They (Russians) move around and adjust like basketball or soccer players," said Pratt. "I've said that's the way for 20 years, but nobody wants to work and learn more than one position."

New Heart Care Will Save Lives

Expensive heart treatment equipment at Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's hospitals will lessen the death rate of coronary heart attack victims. Two intensive care units required $33,000 of special equipment, one-third of which will come from B.C.H.I.S. and two-thirds to be raised by public subscription.

LONBORG HOPEFUL

By Jeff Neate

"Packers just scored... Pass it on."

Trainer Holds Future

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Lonborg, Boston Red Sox' pitching ace, hoped to hobble out of the hospital today and place his immediate future in the hands of Buddy LeRoux, a "trainer of champions."

LeRoux, who administered to Boston Celtics during several National Basketball Association title years before moving to the Red Sox, had an afternoon appointment to pick up Lonborg at Santa Maria Hospital.

The Red Sox trainer showed up to take Lonborg to the LeRoux home Thursday night, but it was decided to hold the pitcher until today.

Lonborg, a 24-year-old right-hander, suffered torn ligaments in his left knee while skiing on the California-Nevada state line Dec. 23 and underwent surgery here Dec. 27.

A new cast applied Thursday failed to dry out sufficiently to permit Lonborg's discharge from the hospital later in the day.

Meanwhile, Tony Conigliaro, the Sox's young slugger who was sidelined for the pennant drive when struck by a pitch last Aug. 18, has tucked away his practice bat for some hunting and singing.

Conigliaro, who was bothered by blurred vision in his left eye for many weeks after he was hit by California's Jack Hamilton, took off Thursday to hunt for seven days near Roswell, N.M.

Conigliaro has been working out three times a week under LeRoux's guidance. However, he quit the indoor batting drills just before Christmas and accepted a six

TALKING TO HIPPIE GENERATION

Love Is Church's Message

By GODFREY ANDERSON
LONDON (AP) — London's Roman Catholic Enquiry Centre, after 14 years of angling for Protestants, has changed its tactics to aim for the millions in swinging Britain who profess no religion.

It still uses mass advertising techniques to put across its message. And the message is fundamentally the same. But biblical texts and Gothic lettering are out. Today's message is in the language of today.

Catholic Enquiry Centre advertisements, shining amidst sex and violence from pages in the popular newspapers, used to show a priest holding aloft a chalice. Readers were asked if they knew what happened at a Catholic mass.

Now the advertisement is topped with a single word in heavy type: LOVE.

"The story of Christ is a love story," the hippies and flower children are told. "And Christianity is the religion of love. We all want to love and to be loved, to understand and to be understood."

The message invites those who want to bring happiness and purpose into their lives to write for booklets which tell clearly and frankly about the Catholic faith.

As in the old advertisements, discretion is assured. The free booklets will be sent at regular intervals "in a plain sealed cover" and "no one will call on you."

Another of the new advertisements takes this form:

SENDS OUT BOOKLETS

"Born in poverty. Lived only 33 years. Spent most of His life in obscurity. Never wrote a book. Never had any position in public life. Was crucified with two thieves, and yet 2,000 years later, more than 950,000,000 people follow Him."

The Catholic Enquiry Centre has been operating since 1954 from a building in the fashionable suburb of Hampstead. It sends out its plain-wrapped booklets to about 25,000 persons each year, about 1,000 of whom later write to say they have been received into the church.

A sample survey has shown that 46 per cent of those answering the centre's advertisements are between the ages of 18 and 25. This was a major factor in causing the centre to bring its approach up to date.

The original set of 21 booklets, one sent by mail each week, was revised and condensed to 11.

"There seems to be a suspicion of all organized religion among the young," said Rev. James O'Brien, the young priest who took over direction of the centre in November. "There is a much greater questioning about everything. And there is more uncertainty than ever before. We have had the leaflets made more scriptural and ecumenical. In fact, we are in a state of continual experimentation."

Another approach used by the centre is through contact cards left around in Roman Catholic churches or wherever else they might catch an interested eye. Catholics are urged to give the card to a non-Catholic friend, but discretion again—not to drop it through his mailbox.

If a Catholic wants the booklets for himself he has to pay about $1 for what non-Catholics get free.

RETIRE from missionary work in India, Miss Mildred Cates is staying with her friend, Miss Annie G. Black, in Victoria. They last met at Indore, central India, in 1956.

INDIA ROLE FADES

Missionaries Reunited Here

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Church Editor

Less than 20 United Church of Canada missionaries are now working in India.

At one time there were more than 60 of them—nurses, doctors, teachers and evangelists.

Why the decline?

"It seems the government of India is afraid the Western nations will have too much influence on their people," says Miss Mildred Cates, a United Church missionary in India for 36 years.

"Many United Church missionaries have returned to Canada on furlough and then been refused permission to return. No one knows just why, but I'm inclined to think it is due to an upsurge of nationalism."

Having retired, after 36 years' service, Miss Cates is no longer concerned whether she will be re-admitted.

"But I am very disturbed that so many competent people — from Canada and other countries — are being shut out. Undoubtedly India has done a tremendous job of training its own people as doctors, nurses and teachers."

"But with all the poverty, sickness and illiteracy still to be found among the great masses of India, the country still needs all the missionaries it can get."

In Victoria, Miss Cates is staying with Miss Annie G. Black, also a retired United Church missionary, at her home at 1975 Lee Street, near the Royal Jubilee Hospital.

They last met at Indore, central India, in 1956. Since then, Miss Black has been a social worker and a member of the psychiatric treatment team at the Jubilee. She retired from this post recently.

"We corresponded regularly," Miss Cates said, "and it was agreed that, when I retired to Canada, I would stay with her in Victoria."

EARLY YEARS

Later, Miss Cates plans to retire in West Vancouver.

Born at Napinka, Man., she spent her early years teaching in Manitoba and Alberta; then decided to become a missionary in India.

"During my 36 years in India, I saw tremendous changes," Miss Cates said, "and one of the biggest was the passing of the Act of Religious Liberty which gave every citizen the right to choose his or her own religion."

Before returning to Canada, Miss Cates did missionary and educational work at Sillamau on the Malina plateau. She lived alone, 50 miles from the nearest white settlers.

"It was a tremendous experience," she said, "and a very rewarding one."

Miss Cates will speak at Cabbro Bay United Church Sunday at 11 a.m., and at Fairfield United at 7:30 p.m.

He Sees Third Union

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Rev. George Barthel has already been through two church unions and Wednesday he will welcome a third.

As a part-time minister, Mr. Barthel, 83, serves the Evangelical United Brethren Church, which is joining the United Church of Canada.

"I'm very definitely happy about this union coming about. I think church union has to come. Protestantism is divided into well over 200 divisions. That won't do any more and they're waking up."

"I began as a minister in 1906 in the Kansas Conference of the Evangelical Church. One of the changes that I've seen is that denominations get no better today. There is ecumenism within Protestantism and there is a good beginning with Roman Catholics and Protestants."

The first union he experienced was between the Evangelical Association and the United Evangelical Church in 1922. They had been one, then divided and reunited.

And in 1946 there was a further union with the United Brethren Church to form the present EUB denomination.

In the union Wednesday, 62 EUB congregations with a membership of 10,170 will be received into the United Church with its membership of 1,064,000.

NEWS OF CITY CHURCHES

Gay Festivities Come to an End

This Sunday is Epiphany Sunday and it marks the close of festivities in honor of the birth of Jesus Christ. The 12 days of Christmas are ended, the Christmas trees are taken down and the cards and decorations put away. The gay Yuletide season is over.

"Yet the true celebration of Christmas continues," says Rev. John Watson, minister of First Baptist Church.

"On this particular Sunday, when our thoughts are directed to the manifestation of Christ, we must ask ourselves what has really taken place in the birth of this child which is of eternal significance."

"Christmas is often spoken of as a child's festival, and certainly since that day childhood has become more precious. But Epiphany reminds us that the child grew into man—and the full-grown Christ forces us to reshape the meaning and purpose of our lives according to His mind and spirit."

Mr. Watson will enlarge on this subject in his morning and evening sermons at First Baptist Church Sunday. The lessons will be from Isaiah 55:4-9; Luke 2:21-35, and Matthew 10:34.

Phyllis Hill will sing Hear My Prayer, O Lord, at the morning service in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

The choir, directed by C. C. Warren, will present the anthems, Fight the Good Fight, and He Keeps Me Singing.

Jack Baines will be soloist with the Sanctuary Choir of Metropolitan United Church Sunday morning. He will sing Repeat Ye (Prindle-Scott), and the choir will be heard in Mueller's arrangement of The Lord Is My Shepherd.

Eric Boothroyd's organ preludes will be the First and Second movements from Handel's Cuckoo and the Nightingale and Barcarolle.

Rev. Albert E. King will speak on The Gate of the Year.

The value of meditation will be discussed at the 9:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. services of the Unitarian Church of Victoria in the Servetus Hall, 106 Superior Street, Sunday.

Rev. Norman Archer begins two new series of sermons in Emmanuel Baptist Church this Sunday—The Power of Prayer in the morning; Parables of Prophecy in the evening.

"Prayer tends to become a duty," he says. "One drags oneself to one's knees, only to fight a losing battle with wandering thoughts. It is almost a relief to get up again and do something."

Mr. Archer will answer the question: Does prayer really work?

Dr. J. H. Pickford, dean of the Northwest Baptist Theological College, Vancouver, will speak at the morning and evening services in Central Baptist Church. His subjects will be Renew Our Days, and Things New.

NEW SERIES

World And The Church

Realities of the present world in relation to the people of God will be the basis of 10 study sessions to be held in the YWCA building from Jan. 11 until March 14.

The sessions will be held each Thursday from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m., says Bishop Denis Rankin, public relations chairman for the Greater Victoria Council of Churches.

Most Rev. Remi De Roo, Roman Catholic Bishop of Victoria, will open the series Thursday, Jan. 11, with a talk on the practical realism of Vatican II.

At the Jan. 18 session, Canon Hilary Butler of the Anglican Church, will speak on the subject, Tomorrow Is Already Here.

On Jan. 25, Rev. William Hill of the Roman Catholic Church and Rev. Roy Hoult of the Anglican will discuss liturgical reform.

New Pedagogy in church and Sunday schools will be discussed on Feb. 1 by Rev. Laura Butler, Mrs. A. L. Bristow, Gillian Clarke and Rev. David Metzger.

"We are confident that some radical changes in the training, retraining and settlement of ministers will soon come," the editorial said.

Rev. Ernest Long, secretary of the church's general council, said 29 ministers switched to secular employment during a recent one-year period.

Rev. Harold Vaughan, secretary of the board of schools and colleges, said the number of candidates for the United Church ministry has declined to about 400 from 622 in 1963.

Again I Say Rejoice

"Rejoice in the Lord always; and again I say, Rejoice . . . And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Jesus Christ."

This Golden Text from Philippians sets the theme for this week's Lesson Sermon on "God" to be read in all Christian Science churches Sunday.

COPING With Fear will be the sermon subject of Rev. Robert J. D. Morris in First United Church at 11 a.m. John N. Bond will share in the conduct of the service and the sacrament of infant baptism will be administered.

A communion service will be held in both Garden City and Wilkinson Road United churches Sunday.

The anthem at 10 a.m. at Garden City will be Break Thou the Bread of Life; and at 11:15 a.m. at Wilkinson Road, In Heavenly Love Abiding.

An inter-denominational prayer and healing meeting will be held in Christ Church Memorial Hall Wednesday at 3 p.m.

"All are welcome," says Mrs. Dorothy Abraham, convener.

In Victoria Truth Centre Sunday morning, Rev. Emma Smiley, DD, will take as her subject Enthusiasm Makes the Difference.

Her evening topic will be The Spirit of Growth. There will be a healing ministry in the church Tuesday at 3:30 p.m.

Miss Mildred Cates, a missionary from India, will speak at the evening service in Fairfield United Church.

Mary Pattison will be soloist at the morning and evening services, and Rev. Dr. H. W. Kerley will speak on A Satisfying Life at the morning worship.

New officers of the United Church Women's group at Gordon United Church, 2777 Kingswood Road, will be installed at the 11 a.m. service Sunday.

Mrs. Violet Hiscocks is president of the group.

PREACHER in Christ Church Cathedral Sunday at 11 a.m. will be Right Rev. Godfrey Gower, Bishop of New Westminster.

LOW MORALE OF CLERGY 'SERIOUS'

TORONTO (CP) — Low morale among the clergy is the most serious problem in the United Church ministry, says The Observer, the church's national publication.

An editorial in the current issue says the situation has become so serious that revolutionary approach to the problem must be taken.

"We are confident that some radical changes in the training, retraining and settlement of ministers will soon come," the editorial said.

Rev. Ernest Long, secretary of the church's general council, said 29 ministers switched to secular employment during a recent one-year period.

Rev. Harold Vaughan, secretary of the board of schools and colleges, said the number of candidates for the United Church ministry has declined to about 400 from 622 in 1963.

Again I Say Rejoice

"Rejoice in the Lord always; and again I say, Rejoice . . . And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Jesus Christ."

Honors to Newsmen Criticized by Times

By JOHN LEBLANC

LONDON (CP) — Award of honors to a few journalists in the Queen's New Year list has generated a stern admonition from The Times but apparently little concern elsewhere.

The Times takes the view that, while honors are all right for newspaper owners, they could be dangled as bait by politicians trying to seduce lesser personnel. Traditionally, they are recommended to the monarch by the prime minister.

In an editorial the newspaper finds what it calls a "disturbing precedent" in the fact that this year's honors list, as distributed for publication, contains a category for "publishing and journalism" and one for broadcasting. An aide-at-10 Downing Street said that as a convenience for reporters handling the story, the mimeographed list—given the press has been divided by occupational classifications since 1962. The official printed list in the Royal Gazette is not so arranged.

BERRY HONORED

The chief press award this year was a peerage to Michael Berry, chairman and editor of the Conservative morning Telegraph. There were a couple of MBE's to writers in the provincial press and none to staffers on national newspapers.

"While all the actual awards this year are no doubt innocent enough," The Times says, "the principle of a government bestowing honors on journalists in a habitual way is highly objectionable."

"If it becomes accepted as a normal thing for journalists to take honors which are in a prime minister's gift, this will, inevitably lead to attempts to manage newspapers by offering the prospect of ribbons and titles to their staff."

The Times urges that "ordinary working journalists" should refuse honors that could have any bearing on their work, and it notes it has had a tradition that staff members do not accept honors.

WELCOMES PEERAGE

However, it welcomes the announcement of a peerage to Berry, head of its morning and Sunday competitor.

The Times itself is in the portfolio of the Thomson organization headed by Canadian-born Lord Thomson, who received the title before he acquired the paper. The other Canadian newspaper peer was the late Lord Beaverbrook, who got his title for political rather than journalistic reasons. His son, Max Aitken, who now heads the Beaverbrook group, has not assumed the hereditary title.

Dermot Morrah, a Times alumnus who now is chairman of the Commonwealth Press Union's press freedom committee, wrote a letter to The Times following its editorial in which he told of a former editor carrying the no-honors tradition to the grave.

Morrah said the former editor, G. E. Buckle, had just completed editing the letters of Queen Victoria in 1932 and had received an offer of a baronetcy from a grateful King George V. This was 20 years after Buckle's retirement.

"That's nice of the King," Buckle said. "Of course, I shall reply humbly begging leave to decline the honor; but I shall ask if he will give me a signed photograph of himself instead."

"You see, I mustn't compromise the Great Paper," Columnist "Peterborough" in the Daily Telegraph tells a different kind of story in the case of Alan Robbins, who received the CBE in 1954 soon after retiring as Times news editor.

Peterborough says Robbins got a rap on the knuckles from the then editor, Sir William Haley (who got his own knighthood before joining The Times), but proprietor Lord Astor of Hever wrote him "heartiest congratulations."

Souls of An Ancient People

By JOHN MANNING

Few tourists visit the Marquesas Islands. There are no hotels and no air service. One may reach the archipelago by packet boat from Tahiti but this service is somewhat erratic and cannot be relied upon for advanced bookings.

The only sure way to seek out the Marquesas is by sailboat.

The islands themselves rise from the sea like the serrated tips of a monarch's crown.

Their now almost deserted valleys once cradled an ancient civilization so severed as to send its canoes on voyages to Hawaiian islands.

They were also warriors. They fought inter-island and inter-valley wars and were in turn exploited by the arrival of Europeans in the eighteenth century.

Thousands of Marquesans died as a result of diseases brought in by whalers, merchant ships and Man O War vessels.

Today the entire population of these islands stands little more than three thousand.

They are governed by the French.

As is the case in all French Polynesia no foreigners are permitted to stay longer than six months. However, the impact of modern civilization and the recent influx of tourists brought in by air to Tahiti has resulted in a departure from the old way of life.

In the Marquesas Islands there are few, if any, of the traditional grass huts left in the native villages. Most of the homes are neatly built of lumber and roofed over with corrugated iron.

Former Victoria Times reporter John Manning and his wife, Pat, are currently on a 12,000-mile "Centennial Cruise" aboard their tiny sailing ship Powindah. The pair started in England and hope to end their cruise in the Inner Harbor. This is the 56th in a series on their adventures.

On the island of Nuku Hiva there are wild cattle as well as goats, chickens and pigs to be had; every ten days a party of six hunters procures enough meat for the whole island.

Fish are plentiful, as are the various jungle fruits such as mangoes, coconuts, papayas and grapefruit. Even the mountain streams contain food; delectable crayfish.

For three weeks Powindah lingered in this wonderful environment. Her crew fished, swam, bathed under idyllic waterfalls, went to a native feast and explored the island by taking long hikes into the mountains. The outer world seemed but a figment of the imagination.

One day we paid a visit to Bob McKetterick, a Britisher who had jumped ship in Taiohae Bay more than half a century back. He had remained in the South Seas, married a Marquesan girl and built up a small business selling goods to the local inhabitants. He is blind now, nearing eighty years of age; his grip is still that of a man who once made his living aloft in a wind-ship.

"There's an island to the north of here," he told us. "They call it Elao. No people there, just sheep and some pigs. A Frenchman tried to live there once but he couldn't stand the isolation. If you go, be careful for sometimes the wind hauls round to the north and if you dragged up on the beach you'd be there a long time before anyone found you. Hell of a place to be shipwrecked."

Three days later Powindah stood off Taiohae Bay under full spread of canvas—bound for the island of Elao.

It took us two days to reach it. The first night we spent tucked into the leeward side of Nuku Hiva, with the wind howling down out of the hills, screeching louder than a cave full of ghosts.

In that place three native fishermen came aboard for dinner.

We drank French wine drawn from the ship's barrel and ate tuna provided by our guests.

They were full of tales about Elao.

"It's a mystery island," one said. "No man can stay there for long. There are spirits there; the souls of the ancient people who made that place their home."

"Yes," said another of the trio, "the place is haunted. Not only that but there are more sharks around than any place I know of and the anchorage is murky. The big sharks love discolored water. I would not swim there."

"I would not even go there. I would sail straight for Honolulu. The dead wish to have no disturbance."

"Perhaps you are right," I said. "But we may not pass this way again. We intend the place no harm. My wife and I collect seashells and since few people go there there must be many shells about. It is a good hobby: to look for shells."

"Not on haunted island."

"Why?"

"The spirits do not appreciate it," he carefully replied.

"If you go there you should take nothing from the island. Not even shells."

Sundown of the following day saw Powindah within pistol shot of Elao Island.

Wild sheep witnessed her cautious entrance into Vajpau Bay. They heard the sudden run of her anchor letting go into five fathoms of water and watched as the boat rounded up to the snub of the chain. The red sails came to rest like the wings of some strange seabird.

"Well ghosts," said the Mate, "here we are."

I felt uneasy, as though I was viewing the ship, wondering what retaliation to invoke upon this intrusion into sacred waters. We had not long to find out.

ARCHIE, SUE STURROCK
... enjoying Hawaiian surf

When Archie Left To See the World 12,000 Went Along

Archibald Sturrock of Vancouver is 85 years young but not musically endowed. So you couldn't describe him as a Pied Piper.

But when he made up his mind to see the world, he took along nearly 12,000 followers.

Now, 13 years, 50 trips and one million miles later, the former Victoria (1928-1944) railway master mechanic is planning his biggest globe-trotting year ever.

Late in the fall he made a "dry run" of a six-day tour down the Rhine from Basel, Switzerland, to Rotterdam, which he described as "the trip of a lifetime." His enthusiasm gains steam at the sight of a travel brochure.

He then hustled 31 Canadian Pacific pensioners off to the Orient on a three-week tour with his wife, Sue, conducting the group.

TRAVEL GUIDE

She is an experienced press relations consultant and travel guide. A one-time radio script writer, she plans the itineraries and has been with her husband on most of the tours. Sturrock got into the travel business by accident. He worked 40 years in Canadian Pacific's mechanical department and rose to be superintendent of motive power for western lines. During that time his travelling was confined to the railway's thin line of steel.

Upon his retirement, he joined a small group of Canadian Pacific pensioners who enjoyed outings on company coastal vessels between Vancouver and cities on Vancouver Island. Not content with this, Sturrock, a born leader, immediately wrestled with the suggestion that "we should really take a trip."

Archibald Sturrock, a native of Dundas, Ont., near Hamilton, headed west in 1904 to work in the sprawling Canadian Pacific shops in Winnipeg.

He came by his technical skills naturally. His father was a mechanical officer with what is now the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railway and his great-granduncle was Archibald Sturrock, designer of locomotive engines in Britain.

One museum piece bearing his name graces the entrance to the Doncaster Works, Britain's biggest rail repair shops.

He was master mechanic for the E and N railway until he retired in 1944 due to ill health.

Needless to say, it was a success and, as Sturrock so aptly described the rosy years that followed, "for the past 13 years we've either been away from home or arranging a tour to take us away."

DURING FINNISH WINTERS

It's Snow or Show Time

Finland, the land of sunlit nights, scenic lakes and ultra-modern cities, not only welcomes visitors during its beautiful summer but offers excitement and enjoyment during the winter months as well.

From the capital city of Helsinki, in the south, to Mount Rukatunturi, just below the Arctic Circle—and near the Russian border, all of Finland in winter is a sportsman's paradise.

At that time visitors may choose between opera and ballet, symphony concerts, sophisticated art exhibits as well as dining and dancing in quaintly native or ultra-modern continental restaurants and nightclubs, and still enjoy all the winter sports.

Lahti is the skiing centre of a nation where even the tiniest tots seem to have been born with skis on their feet.

SPECIAL RATES

All Lahti hotels have special weekend rates for skiers which comprise hotel room and all meals from Saturday morning to Sunday night.

The many marked trails are all illuminated at night and one of them also has an attractive cafe at which to rest and enjoy refreshments. There is a special ski stadium, as well as slalom slopes, a ski jump, ski lift and a skating rink. The International Winter Games are held in Lahti in March.

At Kalpalinna Ski Lodge, 55 miles north of Helsinki, ski enthusiasts have found a new slalom centre.

Snow guns guarantee a winter of six months with slopes snow covered from the beginning of November until early May. The slopes are illuminated at night and so are the forest trails.

Aulanko, close to Hameenlinna, 70 miles north of Helsinki, is Finland's foremost tourist centre both in winter and summer. It has a slalom slope and a ski lift.

Jyväskylä in central Finland, one hour by air from Helsinki, offers the best in skiing combined with the fun of city life in the evenings.

NUMEROUS RIDGES

Kuopio, also in central Finland, is surrounded by numerous ridges. The terrain is excellently suited for slalom after a ride in the ski lift. The many trails are illuminated at night. There are three fine hotels.

From January through April a visiting skier has an opportunity to depart from Helsinki to four different ski areas in Lapland.

Either alpine or cross-country skiing or both are available. For less than $100, the package tour includes jet air transportation, all meals and accommodations.

Should you prefer to go north on your own, the Mount Rukatunturi winter sports centre near the city of Kuusamo offers a slalom track with two ski lifts, night illumination on the slopes, ski instruction and ski rentals. Hotel Rukahovi is excellent and its restaurant is rated very highly by Finnish as well as foreign gourmets.

Grating Collapses

NEW YORK (AP)—A section of sidewalk grating collapsed Thursday at Fifth Avenue and 111th Street in Harlem, buckled under the weight of about 50 persons awaiting an annual gift of shoes from an East Harlem philanthropist. About 24 men fell into the opening.

Skyscrapers Constructed By Termites

By HARRY E. MERCER

Termites are a lot smarter than you might think. At least, in Australia they are.

Take the occupants of the 12-foot "magnetic" termitariums. They occupy Cemetery Plain, about 30 miles south of Darwin in northern Australia.

Each of those veritable skyscrapers is home for some two million termites (Amitermes meridionalis). Inside, they are a maze of passageways and chambers. They are literally thousands of storeys high.

Life in an Australian termitarium is strictly organized. Socially, a rigid caste system is practised. There are rulers, soldiers and workers, each with specific duties.

The wingless king and queen concern themselves with nothing but eating and reproducing, the latter being their sole prerogative.

The soldiers' duties are restricted to guarding their monarchs and defending the colony.

Everything else is left to the workers. They build and repair the termitarium, gather food and store it in special chambers, feed both the young and adults of the other castes, carry off waste matter and lay the dead at rest in galleries especially reserved for the purpose.

But the truly amazing thing about these biologically ancient creatures is the way they position their tombstone-like abodes.

The termitarium's narrow ends always point roughly north and south, and the term "roughly" is important.

These carefully constructed buildings are not aligned with true north but with magnetic north, which varies two, three or even five degrees from true north.

Where the magnetic variation differs, so does the bearing termitarium.

No-one has hazarded to guess how termites can tell magnetic from true north, or even how they know about true north. And no-one seems sure what function the north-south orientation may have.

One theory is that it ensures there is always some part of the interior with an equable temperature.

The structure gains warmth on its eastern side from the morning sun, on its western side from the afternoon sun and its sharp roof absorbs few of the sun's hottest rays at midday.

OPENING UP a whole, fresh white-powdered world to the skier and non-skier is the snowmobile. The vehicles can climb snow-covered hills and mountains, skate across iced ponds and lakes and wind through frosted forests. And, if the hunters can't wait for the first snow, they can even use the scooters over grass and forest trails. Or as this enthusiast from Idaho is doing, drive over your roof top.

A LOT CHEAPER NOW TO VISIT CARIBBEAN

MONTREAL (CP)—The head of the Eastern Caribbean Commission in Montreal says goods and services in the Caribbean now are cheaper because of the recent devaluation of the British pound.

Noelle Richards said in an interview that all West Indian countries in the Commonwealth automatically followed suit because their currencies are linked with the British pound.

As head of the Eastern Caribbean Commission, Mr. Richards represents the seven associated states of Antigua, Grenada, Montserrat, St. Vincent, St. Lucia, Dominica and St. Kitts-Nevis-Anguilla.

Temple Walls Draw Tourists

By GEORGE McARTHUR
SIEM REAP, Cambodia (AP)—Rising from the lush jungles of northwest Cambodia, the magnificent 1,000-year-old temples around Angkor overwhelm visitors with an unmatched profusion of beauty and Eastern mythology.

Lining literally miles of temple walls are hundreds of thousands of the delicately gesturing asparas, the heavenly dancing girls that ancient Eastern man found essential to his view of paradise.

The striking Angkor Wat (wat means temple), which has given its name to the whole region, is actually but one of a profusion of palaces, shrines and temples comprising what ranks as one of the greatest free tourist attractions on earth. Engulfed by the jungle for five centuries, with only monkeys and beasts to enjoy its grandeur, it now is easily accessible.

The temples are the sole remains of what once was one of the world's most grandiose civilizations, replete with Oriental spectacle, sweeping battles and eye-popping opulence.

In its finest moment 1,000 years ago, the temple district was the centre of a civilization that stretched far beyond Cambodia's present boundaries. Called the Khmers, the Cambodians were the undisputed masters of most of Southeast Asia and a rival to the powerful Chinese civilization to the north.

While the temples and statuary attract the tourists, serious students are equally enthralled by the engineering projects of the time. Installed in what is now the poorest part of the nation, the ancient kings built canals, waterways and other water projects rivaling, as do the temples, the ancient projects of the Egyptians on the Nile.

Like the ancient Egyptian monuments, many of the temples were inspired by the desire of ancient kings to ensure their immortality in stone.

The Khmers eventually were defeated by the Thais and gave up the ancient capital of Angkor to settle in the present site of Phnompenh.

Historians have fixed 1431 as the date the magnificent temples were abandoned to the jungles and the beasts. For the next five centuries they slept, with great trees gradually splitting stone walls and twining completely over ancient spires.

Then in the middle of the last century, the famed French Orientalist Henri Mouhot set out to rediscover the temples and came upon Angkor Wat itself—an experience he described as "like moving from darkness to light."

He published his findings in 1864 and the modern restoration of Angkor was begun, than as now largely financed by the French.

Burial Grounds

It is not generally realized that the Danube, which flows through six countries on its way to the Black Sea and borders two others, is Czechoslovakia's largest river.

In the area of Bratislava, the capital of Slovakia, the mighty stream, a favorite with tourists the world over, flows for about 75 miles within Czechoslovakia and along the Czechoslovak-Hungarian border before it plunges southward through the centre of Hungary into Yugoslavia.

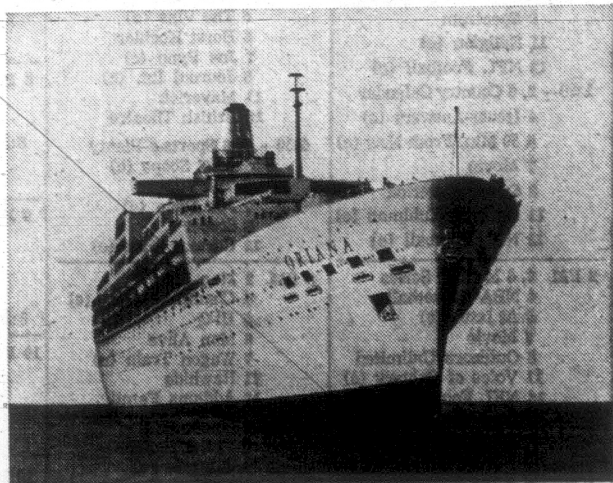

Although the Danube is peaceful for much of its 1,725-mile course, it has some wild or difficult stretches. One of these is the Czechoslovak stretch where the river passes over an enormous basin that came into existence in the later tertiary era more than a million years ago.

Here, the shifting of the river bed and the constant accumulation of silt between Bratislava and Komarno (the Slovak town at the confluence of the Vah and the Danube where the composer Franz Lehár was born) have posed many a navigational problem.

The river banks are the burial grounds of Celtic and Roman relics, old Slavonic graves and the foundations of early Christian churches, and the river itself is the subject of many a yarn of sunken Turkish galleys full of gold.

TIPS FOR HOME GARDENERS . . .

Clean, Razor Sharp, Properly Adjusted

By JACK BEASTALL
Shopping, gift-wrapping, decorating and holidays have been the main occupation of gardeners for the past month. This weekend, decorations will be taken down and stored away for another year. Fortunately, decorations come down much faster than they go up and we probably shall find we have a little time to spare.

Jack
We know that the rough tear of dull secateurs takes longer to heal than the clean cut of a sharp knife. Also that a slow healing wound is liable to infection resulting in die-back of the pruned shoot. A blunt, poorly adjusted lawnmower has the same tearing effect as blunt secateurs. The torn grass leaves gradually die back at the ends and the lawn, takes on a brown, unhealthy look.

The wise gardener will be the one who spends his few spare minutes this weekend loading the lawnmower into the trunk of his car for delivery to the service shop first thing on Monday. Because gardening is a 12-month hobby here on the coast, most of us with gasoline powered equipment do not follow the manufacturer's instructions for the winter storage of gasoline engines so that we usually find them reluctant to operate when needed.

resolution to do the job this weekend—and then see that the resolution is kept!

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

Q. How can I have sweet corn to eat over a long period? It always comes to perfection during a two-week period in early September. There must be some way to extend the period, or is it a matter of sowing different varieties? A.B.C., Victoria.

A. Try the new Golden Miniature, growing to four feet, with cobs five to six inches in length, very fine flavor. Last year we sowed seed of this variety in peat pots on March 25 indoors at 65 degrees F. Planted out June 2, and picked first cobs on July 7. This year we plan to sow one third of requirements in peat pots, the second third outdoors when first ones are planted out, and remainder one month later. This should give cobs from early July to mid-September.

It is important to sow into at least two rows right from the beginning to ensure pollination which is accomplished by wind. These plants can be 15 to 18 inches apart in all directions since they are small.

WEEK'S WORK

Broad leaved evergreen shrubs for winter indoor (and outdoor) decorations — leucotoe, laurustinus, elaeagnus, piomium, eucalyptus, nandina and some of the grey leaved plants.

These are all grown locally even if you do not recognize the names. If not already done, prune Chaenomeles japonica (flowering quince) now that flower buds are clearly visible.

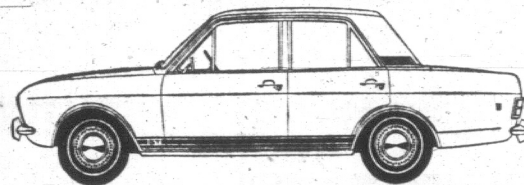

Check stored fruits and vegetables, also stored corns, bulbs, tubers and other roots.

Check house plants for greenfly. Hold plant upside down, douse foliage thoroughly in pail of tepid, mild soapuds to which has been added one-half teaspoon of nicotine sulphate (Blackleaf-40).

Keep off wet soil if it is of heavy clay content. Looser well drained soils can be worked at almost any time.

An Invisible Wall!

By PAULINE GRAVES
The best way to make a room seem larger is with glass or mirrors. Glass renders a wall invisible and mirrors reflect the room so that it seems twice its size.

Both offer hazards, however, in that this virtue of invisibility can cause people to walk into the glassed surface. The problem, then, is to identify glass or mirrors as such, without destroying their transparent qualities.

Shown here is a solution, handsomely done. In a dining room, a serving ledge travels across the mirror's face, an effective barricade to traffic. Yet the mirror performs its reflecting function from floor to soffit, making the room seem larger.

For decoration, two walnut panels, one down each side, frame the mirrored area.

If the two panels were placed side by side, one would see that together they equal the mirror's size. Working out these measurements carefully assured pleasing proportions. Wall lights and molding in a simple pattern add interest to the wall.

The ledge ties the three areas together, narrow as it goes across the panels, and widening in front of the mirror to a usable 15 inches.

Other safety devices that can be used include placing a furniture piece in front of glass, hanging bits of colored glass from the ceiling, or marking the space with decorative paper designs.

MODERN MEDICINE ACCELERATES USE

Continuing Blood Clinics May End Periodic Crises

By PETE LOUDON
Should blood donor clinics be set up in Victoria on a continuous basis?
Should hospitals establish blood collection centres to backstop Red Cross clinics?
Is the day approaching when once again cash payments must be offered to donors?
These and similar questions will be discussed here soon by medical authorities representing both city hospitals and the B.C. section of the Canadian Red Cross.

The talks were planned following an emergency situation which developed both here and in Vancouver during the Christmas-New Year holiday.

A blood shortage threatened

postponement of vital operations here. The crisis was averted when 423 Victorians flocked to a clinic placed on emergency footing Thursday night.

Friday, servicemen at Canadian Forces Base Esquimalt further bolstered the diminishing supplies with a 318-pint donation.

(Service personnel consistently give blood beyond all proportion to their numbers in the community and have been largely responsible for avoiding many blood shortages in the past.)

Dr. K. R. Thornton, Royal Jubilee Hospital pathologist, Dr. Garth Walters of St. Joseph's Hospital and Dr. Terry Stout, medical director for the provincial blood bank at Vancouver, will meet to study measures aimed at placing blood donations on a more regular basis.

without lining up outside in the cold as was necessary during the crisis Thursday.

Perhaps greater publicity should be given to awards for continuing donors. Perhaps municipalities should move into this field of recognition which heretofore has been handled by the Red Cross itself.

Blood-letting is painless and brief and can be undertaken without harmful effect by any adult between teen-age and the mid-60s every three months. But is this widely enough known?

For many years donors were paid—usually about $5 a pint. Many of today's professional people helped put themselves through university by selling blood. The Canadian

Red Cross opposes this system and doctors generally shy from the suggestion—but continuing emergencies could demand a reappraisal.

The way it's done now, a blood donation is the one gift which costs the rich man as much as the poor man, no gift can be more personal and few are more important. Somehow, more people must be taught to see it that way.

Arthur Mayse

The hope of every old-fashioned university administration is that the Berkeley bogey will stay far from its halls. But because of the arrival on all campuses of some startlingly new-fashioned students, I expect that the Berkeley incident will prove to have been merely the preliminary rumblings of an academic revolution.

As one who dislikes controversy and loud dissent, I hope it will proceed quietly. This is unlikely, however, since practically everything that youth undertakes is accompanied by a hellish amount of noise. In any case, it is now under way, and will continue until the dehumanized automat approach to education that provoked the California revolt has been replaced by something better.

Gains are going to be much more slowly achieved than the ardent advocates of change anticipate. But eventually, what I see as the university of the future will begin to emerge.

It will be neither a diploma mill nor a job-training school, and from it will come men and women competent to deal with a future that scares the hell out of me.

They will be involved, committed people, and I suspect they may not only save the world but make it a better abode.

You may have one of these new-fashioned students in your home. If so, I don't know whether to congratulate you or pity you, because they are a far remove from the uncomplicated Joe College of the past.

They call themselves activists, a term of Leftist flavor. Yet, in my experience of them, they scorn the regimentation of the Left.

Since they disown most of the traditions and comforting beliefs which our static culture has handed down to them, they are by no means easy to live with; in fact only their parents and other activists could possibly love them.

Their number is comparatively small—one estimate, which is almost certainly overgenerous, sets it at about 20 per cent of the university student body. But because they are ardent and angry and appallingly vocal, it is from the activists that our universities are beginning to take their tone.

I don't pretend to understand them, and am not sure that I even like them very much. Their idealist-ideologist view tends to bewilder a man of my generation. But I admire them in a puzzled sort of way, and approve their passion for change in a world that could use it.

As students, they are not content to regard their universities as extensions of the high schools.

They think that student representatives should have a place in administration.

They are eager to be rid of the examination system and to trade the set-piece lecture for the seminar at which the instructor is guide and catalyst, his function less to impart knowledge than to put minds to work.

I am afraid that, if they get their way, education is likely to take on some new dimensions.

It is natural that these formidable young boat-rockers and would-be disturbers of the status quo should be at their strongest in Canada's university press.

This pleases and also scandalizes me, since their language tends to be ungirded, and they frequently write as if haranguing from a soap box.

It is not my aim to romanticize these challengers of placidity, and I know that life's necessities will cool many of them.

But not, I trust, until they have established a beachhead for the next wave of disillusioned protesters against education as it is and the world as they find it.

Car's Headlights Off, Driver Pays $300

Frederick Bligh, 318 Goldstream, was fined $300 in central court today for impaired driving. Police reported they observed a car driven by Bligh going north on Government Street with the headlights off. He pleaded guilty.

'Prudent Stewardship' In Handling of Estate

Recent payment of a $200,000 executor's fee by Victoria city council was made against the advice of city solicitor T. P. O'Grady.

But the action was defended today against criticisms published elsewhere.

The story, told by a source close to the matter, is this:

On Dec. 5 the city of Victoria received a cheque for $2 million from Canada Trust Company. The sum represented the bulk of the city's legacy from the estate of the late Thomas Shanks McPherson.

The city was also presented with a bill for $200,000 for Canada Trust's administration of the estate over a five-year period.

City solicitor T. P. O'Grady

advised council to delay payment of the executor's bill. He said he had no doubts the account was accurate and audited. But he felt the amount might be deemed too high by a court decision.

Mr. O'Grady said the charge might not be in accord with the law governing the administration of estates. He thought the trust company should submit it for approval by counsel and until this was done the city should withhold payment.

Mayor Hugh Stephen absented himself from the discussion by council because he had served on the board which advised on the estate's administration, prior to assuming office as mayor. The balance of council voted to pay the account without question.

The anonymous source who related the story today said this circumstance has caused some criticism of council and the trust company, which he felt to be unwarranted.

FEE AUTHORIZED

He pointed out, and Mr. O'Grady also touched on this in his remarks to council, that the fee named by Canada Trust was laid down by the late Mr. McPherson.

He said in a memorandum that it should be 2 1/2 per cent of the capital realized and five per cent of income receipts.

Mr. O'Grady had told council this was not necessarily binding on the city however. He cited the case of a similar bequest to an Ontario city where the courts had reduced the fee from $375,000 to $149,000.

Victoria City council however was in receipt of a further memorandum from Mr. McPherson stating that he wanted no controversy in connection with his planned disposal of his estate, or the fee.

And council also took into consideration that any legal action to challenge the fee might cost as much as $15,000—and the action still be lost.

The aldermen also reportedly took into consideration that the fee laid down by Mr. McPherson was payment for not just administering the estate but for subsequent investments which increased the city's original legacy from $1 million to what will eventually total about $2.7 million.

"It was a prudent stewardship over a period of five years. Mr. O'Grady said this himself," said the informant.

The trust company also acted on behalf of 16 other beneficiaries, including the University of Victoria. None of them to date have questioned the rate at which the executor's fee was set.

It was also pointed out that the fee, when spread over the period of the administration, amounted to about five per cent per year—a rate acceptable or less than is normally charged for administration of other business interests.

Market Board To Force Hike In Egg Price

A 10 per cent increase in the price of eggs is expected this year.

A spokesman for producers said today the newly created B.C. egg marketing board, will seek to prevent overproduction which resulted last year in losses to the industry.

Egg surpluses caused prices to drop below the cost of production.

The board, the first of its kind in Canada, was established under the Natural Product (B.C.) Marketing Act. Its main purpose will be to adjust production to market requirements.

The act gives the board wide powers, such as authority to issue market quotas and to fix prices to be paid to producers.

Egg production will be controlled by seeing that not too many chicks are raised this spring.

Professor To Speak

Ninth annual United Church conference on evangelism will be held at the Island Hall, Parksville, Jan. 17 to 21.

Chief speaker will be Dr. Loren Halvorson of the American Lutheran Church, who is professor of sociology at Augsburg College, Minneapolis.

Theme of the conference will be Stress, Strategy and Structure for Mission. The conference is for clergy and laymen.

Shift Systems Or Year Round?

Possession Not Proved By Crown

A lengthy drug trial in central court Friday ended with dismissal of the charges over the legal issue of possession.

Philip Isaacson, 20, of 1032 McGregor, had been charged with possession of marijuana and of cannabis (resin) a marijuana derivative, after a police raid on his apartment Dec. 15.

When six officers from the RCMP, city and Saanich police and a city policewoman walked into the accused's three-room apartment, they found 11 people there, court was told Friday.

Police found a "joint," (marijuana cigarette) under a bed, a pipe with marijuana residue in the bowl and a small bag of marijuana.

'SOLE RENTER'

Isaacson was charged after he told officers he was "the sole renter" of the suite.

In his ruling Magistrate Ostler said a person who rents an apartment is not necessarily the occupant or the sole occupant.

No evidence of the length of tenancy was offered, he added. The drug could have been on the premises a long time.

"A case of this kind presents extreme difficulty for the officers of the Crown," he said in his summary, leading to dismissal.

Delivery Delays Wiring Project

Expected completion date for underground wiring on Gorge Road between Admirals and Gorge View now is set for the end of March, Reeve Hugh Curtis said Friday.

Necessary underground works have been installed but the delay has involved delivery of electrical cable and other materials to go into the conduit. It is hoped the utility poles will come down by early April, he said.

Freeze to Force Trustee Decision

By DON VIPOND
Education Reporter

The Greater Victoria school system and its 30,000 pupils are at the brink of a classroom shortage which could mean shifts or year-round terms beginning next September.

School board chairman Peter Bunn said today the district is almost at "the point of no return" for building needed accommodation by the fall.

Under the provincial government's current freeze on all but "essential" classroom construction, over $3,000,000 worth of building plans are stalled at the department of education.

"We've got to get release on quite a lot of stuff almost immediately," said Mr. Bunn. "If we don't, it's inevitable that shifts will become a reality in September."

PREPARING REPORT

A detailed survey of current facilities is being prepared to show the board exactly where it stands, said the chairman.

Then it will settle what crisis measures it will take to squeeze pupils into classes.

A shift system means classrooms are used twice during the same school day, said Mr. Bunn.

Possibly half the school population would attend classes between 8 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. with the next shift between 1 and 5 p.m. It doesn't mean teachers teach twice.

Shifts produce a sub-standard teaching situation, he said.

DISRUPTED

"It means the over-all life of the school is grossly disrupted. It means there is very little extra-curricular activity. Choirs, drama and sports, this sort of thing, go by the board. The mechanics of the situation just don't permit them."

Shifts turn schools into "teaching factories, instead of educating the whole child."

Related cultural activities are important in education, said the chairman.

He summarized the effect of shifts on schools this way: "You open the windows, try and change the air, and then another gang comes in. It's just not desirable."

On the possibility of other measures, including schools open year-round, Mr. Bunn said he believed it was the obligation of the school board to assess every avenue, including this one.

BEST SYSTEM

"It is our duty to maintain the very best possible system. We've got to look at every possibility and come up with the best answer."

Plans dating from last August are being held by the department of education.

"The plans are completed. All we want is the okay to go to tender."

Time has all but run out, he said. It takes a month to complete the tendering functions, and another month to clear up other administrative needs.

"That only leaves seven months for building. Some of our projects couldn't be done in that time. Some could."

FOR YESTERDAY

The district's school construction program is not a plan for tomorrow but for yesterday, he said.

"The logical way is to build for expansion, for tomorrow."

No business could operate the way the government is forcing the educational system to go, he claimed.

Mr. Bunn said he agreed completely with the views of Campbell River school board chairman Bruce Saunders who said recently his district faces a "bleak" 18 months in education.

"Because of the present freeze by the provincial government on building programs in the school districts we are going to have to look seriously at the semester system, school on a 12-month basis and teacher aides," said Mr. Saunders following election to his third term as chairman.

"We must do this if we want to maintain our present teacher-pupil ratio. I don't know how we are going to do it but if any school district in the country can do it, we can."

Ask The Times

Q. I would like to join the Consumer's Association of Canada; could you give me their address and the fee required. F.M.G.

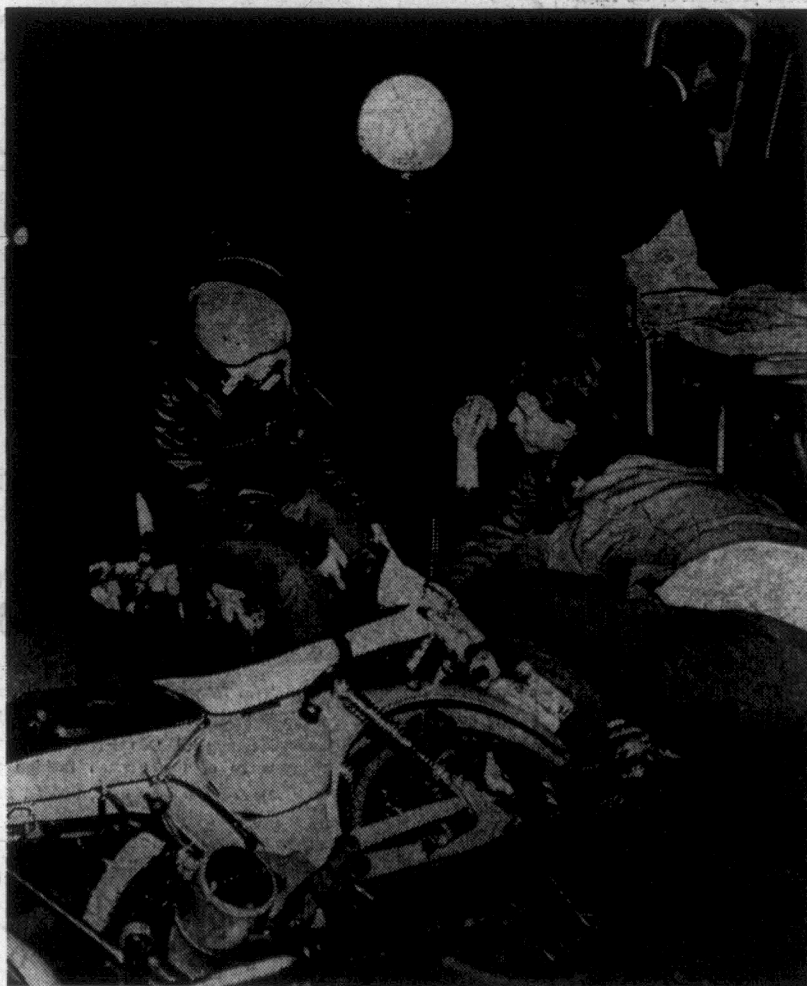

A. The association's address is 100 Gloucester St., Ottawa 4, Ontario and the fee is $5. This entitles you to a year's subscription to the Canadian Consumer magazine, according to local publicity director for the association, Mrs. V. F. Ball.

Q. Could you tell me please if they accept women in the armed services in the United States and if so, to whom would I have to write.

A. Yes, they do. For the U.S. Army write the Armed Forces Examining and Induction Station, 1515 Alaskan Way South, Seattle. For the Air Force, write the USAF Recruiting Centre, 6405 Roosevelt Way NE in Seattle. And for the Navy, write their recruiting centre at 2222-2nd St., Seattle.

Miss Jacquelyn Macrae, one of the first to be chosen as a Victoria 1968 debutante.

ON FEBRUARY 2

Will Be Presented

For most of the members of Victoria's young set, the most exciting part of the holiday season is over. But, for a few young women, the climax is yet to come.

These are the women, mostly in their late-teens, who will become debutantes this year and be presented to His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. George R. Pearkes at the annual Debutante Ball, to be held at the Empress Hotel on Friday, February 2.

Officials of the United Services Institution of Vancouver Island, who sponsor the social event, have announced the names of the first three young women to be accepted as 1968 debutantes.

The first is Miss Lindsay Ann Bowen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Bowen, 4912 Lochside Drive. The 18-year-old debutante is a graduate of St. Ann's Academy. She will be sponsored by Major D. L. Hannah.

A 17-year-old Grade 12 student at St. Margaret's School will also make her debut. She is Miss Mary-Ann Gilbert, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. E. W. S. Gilbert, 357 Foul Bay Road. She will be sponsored by her father, a former wing commander with the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Officer Cadet Bruce Jeffries will be Miss Jacquelyn Macrae's escort when she is presented to His Honor and Mrs.

Miss Mary-Ann Gilbert will be sponsored by her father, Rev. E. W. S. Gilbert.

Pearkes at her coming-out ball. A graduate of Claremont Senior Secondary School, she is now employed at the University of Victoria. Her parents are Capt. Alexander Macrae and Mrs. Macrae, 8428 Lawrence Road.

Prime Minister To Visit Canada

His Excellency, Levi Eshkol, prime minister of Israel, will be the guest of honor when the Hadasah-Wizo 22nd biennial convention opens at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal. He will give the keynote address at opening ceremonies, to be held at 8:30 p.m. on Sunday, Jan. 14.

The prime minister is on a state visit to Washington and Ottawa, and will visit Toronto prior to arriving at Montreal. Mrs. Anne L. Eisenstat is the national president of the Hadasah-Wizo organization in Canada. Dominion vice-president, Mrs. Hyman Wisenthal will be chairman for the coming convention.

ON THE MAINLAND

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. George R. Pearkes will cross to Vancouver on Monday, where they will attend a reception and dinner in the directors' board room of the Pacific National Exhibition, prior to attending the official opening of the new Pacific Coliseum. Following the opening they will attend the Ice Capades show. Inspector L. E. Rosberg, RCMP, will be the aide-de-camp in attendance.

Hawaiian Tournament

Several Victorians will leave on a charter plane from Seattle on Tuesday as members of a group of bridge players on the Pacific Coast who will spend the next two weeks in Honolulu and play in the Honolulu Regional Bridge Tournament. Those attending from Victoria will be Mr. and Mrs. Earle Dye of Elrick Place, Mr. and Mrs. James Duprau of Helmcken Road, Mrs. Dorothy Duprau of Dunlevy Street, and Mrs. Molly Collins of Gosper Crescent.

To Visit Morocco

Capt. Vernon Green and Mrs. Green of Joan Crescent will leave Wednesday for the first stage of a trip to Morocco. They will catch a plane in Vancouver on Friday. They are the only couple from Victoria taking the organized tour which includes a brief stop in Paris, France. While in Morocco they will stay at the Club Mediterranean, just outside Agadir, and will visit the historic city of Marrakesh. The trip will take three weeks.

Off to Honolulu

The Thunderbird No. 4 Fleet of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club has organized a no-host party, to be held in the clubhouse this coming Tuesday at 8 p.m. The affair will honor Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Gilbert of Larkdowne Road, fleet members who are leaving shortly to make their home in Honolulu. Mr. Gilbert, a former staff member of the Victoria Machinery Depot, will work in the shipyards on the island of Hawaii.

Left Today

Mr. and Mrs. Gervase Chambers left today for Nassau where they will stay at the Grosvenor Club as the guests of Mrs. P.-G. Griffin. During their absence their Aloha Avenue home will be occupied by Mr. A. R. M. Campbell.

Novel Container

A basket decorated with a miniature bride held the gifts for Mrs. Sean Carrigan, the former Diane Sinclair, when she was entertained at a shower prior to her marriage last Saturday. Miss Evelyn Moon was the hostess for the party which was held in her Gladstone Avenue home. Red roses on corsage were presented to the guest.

Nursing Standards in Nigeria Helped by Canadian Training

By SUSAN BECKER
OTTAWA (CP)—A petite Nigerian nurse is using the information she gained on a three-month visit to Canada to improve nursing services in her own country.

Adeyinka Aderogba, a poised, chic woman who speaks precise English, is assistant to the chief nurse in Nigeria's federal ministry of health.

She visited nursing schools and hospitals in Ontario last fall on a World Health Organization scholarship, completing her stay with a few hours talking to Helen Mussallam, executive director of the Canadian Nurses' Association.

The revolution in nursing which involves a nurse looking at the patient as a total person began in North America, Miss Aderogba said.

"Although it started here it has had an effect throughout the nursing world. Leaders in nursing have felt for some time nursing education needs better quality."

Nursing in Nigeria was more traditional, more job-oriented. Now the thinking was that nursing should have a wider scope.

"Nigeria is a very young country—seven years old. We have had occasion to look at ourselves and have made a start to embrace these concepts."

"But if there is going to be a revolution in nursing, the nurses are going to have to start it themselves."

In Nigeria, she said, there are 11,000 registered nurses to serve 55,000,000 people.

"We have not got a sufficient number of hospitals and hospital beds yet. As we get more we can produce more nurses. We are trying to develop our facilities."

Beauty Cleansing The Skin

Many of the world's most beautiful women attribute the clear, fine loveliness of their complexions to the toning qualities of a special lemon cleanser that floats away all beauty-robbing impurities without depriving the skin of its natural beauty. The complexion immediately reflects the rewarding benefits as the cleanser is smoothed over the skin. Dry, ageing lines are eased and the skin becomes clear and softly endowed with a radiant bloom. Jelvyn cleansing milk is the perfect cleanser for all skin types.

Patients were given free medical treatment and paid only small hospital fees, however.

"I'm not at this stage saying whether this is a good system or a bad system. I don't know. We haven't actually settled down to one way of doing things yet."

Miss Aderogba was especially interested in in-service education—continuing educational programs for graduate nurses.

She was impressed by the way hospitals promote continuing education.

A nurse for 18 years, she is not certain exactly how her Canadian experience will be put into practice at home.

The political situation has changed in the last six months, she said, and the country now is divided into 12 states. She was not sure how much responsibility for health they would have.

New York Couturiers Take Wraps Off New Fashions

Ruffles and Romance—The waist has returned to the new season's fashions, and women are glad. Here, Mignon highlights the waistline in beige peau de soie. Ruffles titivate the sleeves and neckline to help set the stage for romance.

Arranged by PAT DUFOUR,

Gangsters and Gals—Maybe it's not the sort of outfit you'll expect to see on the corner of Douglas and Yates, but the Bonnie and Clyde gangster look hit the New York runways this week. Next week will see the American Designers' Collection in New York. The gangster theme will again be in the spotlight, never more than with this Joan Leslie outfit that has a black and white stripe trenchcoat, lined in white and black dots; matching skirt and yellow linen shirt.

IN STEP WITH STYLE By Nona Damaske

In the past week over 200 fashion editors have attended more than 60 showings presented by The New York Couture Group at the Hotel Pierre in New York City.

Thousands of words have been written and sent to newspapers all over North America to be read by women who wish to keep abreast of the subtle changes in fashion.

Shape makes headlines this season . . . the body-conscious silhouette will gradually replace the shapeless shifts and tents.

A belt is the fashion banner of 1968 . . . belts on dresses, skirts, coats, blouses . . . in shiny patent, crushed leathers and co-ordinating costume fabrics. The belt still wanders from high under the bosom to low on the hip but the chic woman defines the natural waistline.

Damaske

Shirts, overflowing with ruffles, team with at-home skirts or wide flaring trousers. Shirts with a "Dandy" appearance mate with late day dressy suits.

Shirtdresses will be the backbone of many wardrobes this spring and summer.

Vests are visiting the feminine suit and separates scene.

Evening is a filmy affair with floaty fabrics, feathers and ruffles. Skirts have miles of yardage . . . necklines are deeply slashed.

Hemlines are away up there . . . except for a flurry to the look of Bonnie and Clyde.

Hosiery patterns are icier and tinted opalescent sheers will be big news.

Shoe heels will remain low and chunky. Toes will tread the fashion runway . . . bluntly squared or bulbously rounded.

Hardware trim will be found on clothes, shoes, handbags and belts. The trend is toward femininity . . . we should be able to tell the girls from the boys in 1968.

All Set for a Safari—The word is tiger! North American "jungles" will welcome the sight of this safari suit by Ginori that's made of white cotton twill and has a softly-tailored shirt to tuck into its mobile culotte skirt. Just the thing for a Leap Year hunting season!

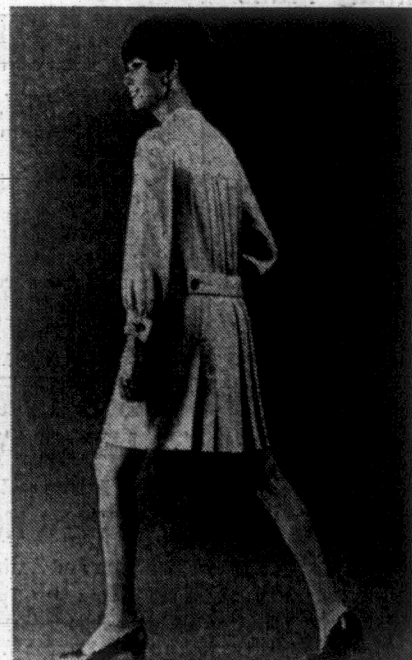

Happy Houseboy—Home will never look the same once you've tried "The Houseboy," one of spring '68's newest silhouettes. B. H. Wragge designed this houseboy coat in a wild wild print, sashed it in a cummerbund of the same print and teamed it with a pristine white linen jumpsuit.

Long and Lovely—Marie McCarthy designed this Mao-collared long-shaped jacket for the Larry Aldrich collection. Made of white wool twill, it sports a contrasting sleeveless navy crepe blouse with a ring collar.

Daringly Decollete—A giant jeweled pin adds extra excitement to the deep V-plunge empire bodice of this midnight matte jersey creation of Hannah Troy. The circular skirt cascades to the floor from a sashed waist.

A Familiar Favorite—The shirt dress, long the darling of many women, received special treatment at this week's shows. Ole Borden of Rembrandt used silk twill for this beauty, adding a half-belt to accent pleats that burst forth from a deep yoke. The front remains starkly simple.

They say that hindsight is better than foresight. Anyhow, it is surely true that our backview is important as well as the way we look from the front. One of the most usual figure defects observable from the rear is the layer of fat across the shoulders which bulges around the brasiere. Help banish it with the following exercise: Lie on the floor on your back facing the wall with your hips about a foot-and-a-half away from the wall, depending on your height. Straighten your legs and place your heels on the wall. Cross your arms and extend fingers of each hand so that you can catch yourself with your hands. Lift your hips from the floor and roll from side to side, catching yourself with your hands at the end of each roll, with your right hand at the end of the roll to the left and your left hand at the end of the roll to the right. If you would like to have my tested hip slimming exercises send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for "Hip Exercises." Address to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Enamelled Saucepans For Kitchen Elegance

By Penny Saver

Elegance is creeping back into our homes. For years, many homes have been filled with ultramodern furniture, styled along the straight and sterile lines set by the Bauhaus. Furnishings are expensive and most people are unable to follow a new trend. The plain but elegant lines of Danish furniture, however, are now frequently seen. Andy Warhol and the "flower people" have introduced past styles into our homes more quickly however and many housewives are decorating with the relatively cheap hippie flowers and paper tiffany shades, derived from the work of that famous jeweler in the elegant "art nouveau" era, posters including the works of another famous "art nouveau" figure, Aubrey Beardsley, and exotic bead curtains.

This elegance is creeping into the kitchen as well. The idea of a cooking pot used to be something that food was cooked in, and never seen at the table. These pots were strictly utilitarian and made of copper or cast iron. Now, however, manufacturers are trying to make pots that can travel to the table—thus saving on the number of dishes to be washed—and many of their ideas are as sensible as they are attractive.

One of the best ways to make a pot lovely to look at is to give it a coat of enamel. Enamel and porcelain finishes do not add taste to the food and are easy to clean. I have seen two lines of enamelled cookware with designs that make them attractive enough for the table.

One line is heavy-duty cookware made in France with a small intricate pattern in golds and browns on a white porcelain background. The base of the pot is black so that heat marks won't show at the table and the handles are all of a heat-proof substance. There is a casserole dish with handles and a lid at $12.95, and saucepans at $9.95 for the small size and $11.25 for the larger size. The frying pan, also so lovely that it won't look out of place on the table, has an added feature that makes sense. It has an extra little handle, like the ones on the casserole dish, opposite the main handle so that it can be lifted with two hands for added safety. This fry pan costs $9.95.

From Belgium come enamelled, cast-iron, lidded casseroles with a lining of non-stick material. They are finished in plain white that will match any place setting. These casseroles are quite large and cost $20.95 or $22.95.

Belgium sends us cast-iron cookware finished with enamel. This line includes saucepans in white with a maple leaf design in red and yellow. These have wooden handles and a lip to make pouring easy. These saucepans come in two sizes at $6.95 and $7.95.

If you would like to know where I found these items please call me at 832-131.

DEAR ABBY...

Simple Cable Can Save the Day

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: We are in a terrible mess. My 15-year-old daughter, Tessie, has been corresponding with an English pen-pal (a boy) for about a year and a half. He is 18. Tessie got his name from some "Hands Across the Sea" program at school.

Anyway, it seems that Tessie told him that we were very well-to-do. (We certainly are not!) She made life here sound so attractive that this boy is coming here! He is going to work his way over on a freighter and says he will stay with us until he gets "situated." This could be a matter of months, Abby.

We live in a three-bedroom house. My husband and I and the baby in one room, the four boys in another room, and Tessie and her three sisters in the third room. And my mother sleeps on a cot in the living room. How can we head off this English boy? I am a nervous wreck and am about ready to slaughter Tessie.

WRECK

DEAR WRECK: A four-word

cable to England might be a cheap investment. "DELAY TRIP, LETTER FOLLOWS." In your letter, explain that you are unable to put him up, so unless he can make other arrangements for housing "until he gets situated," he had better reconsider.

DEAR ABBY: My son (I'll call him James) is 17. A week ago he came down with a body rash so I sent him to a skin specialist. The doctor examined the boy, gave him a lamp treatment, and told him to come back on Monday for another treatment. James now says that he will not go back. My husband finally got the boy to tell him why.

Well, it seems that James had to undress completely and lie on his back under some sort of lamp for the treatment. The doctor turned the lamp on, then left the room and sent in a nurse who was not much older than James. He said this girl stood beside the table the whole 15 minutes while he was having the lamp treatment and he had never been so embarrassed in all his life. There was a timer on the lamp and she didn't have to do anything, but she just stood there anyway.

My husband agreed with James, and says that I should phone the doctor, explain the situation and ask him to give the boy the treatment himself. I say the doctor will think that I am crazy. After all, he hired that girl to perform such services and he will certainly not stand there for 15 minutes himself.

We are still not in agreement over this. Would you be kind enough to give us your opinion?

JAMES' MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Call the doctor and tell him how your son feels. I think it's a perfectly normal reaction and a valid complaint.

DEAR ABBY: I am a freshman at college and have a serious question to ask you. When a boy tries to get you to go all the way by asking, "You wouldn't buy a pair of shoes without trying them on, would you?" What is a girl supposed to say?

STUPID

DEAR STUPID: "I'd rather buy a pair of shoes without trying them on, than get stuck with a pair that's been worn by everybody in town."

CONFIDENTIAL TO JERRI: Just read your 34-page letter and shall send you a personal reply when you send me your address. In the meantime, if you wish to try over split milk, next time—please condense it.

Physiotherapists Write Guide To Assist Expectant Mothers

by KARIN MOSTER

MONTREAL (CP) — "No girl should enter a labor room ignorant and unprepared," says Eleanor Findlay.

"And no girl should enter it with the ambition to go it alone," says Margaret Capes.

"Babies really are to enjoy," declare the two physiotherapists, co-authors of "Today You Are Pregnant," a guide for mothers-to-be.

"The reason we wrote the book was to help make labor as easy as possible for the mother so she has both mental and physical energy left over to enjoy her baby after it's born," Mrs. Findlay and Mrs. Capes, both of whom have children of their own, have been teaching about pregnancy and labor for 15 years. They give classes at the Catherine Booth Hospital in Montreal.

Their 110-page book, written in layman's language, begins at the 16th week of pregnancy and includes an illustrated course of pre-natal and post-natal exercises.

"By telling the pregnant woman what is actually happening to her body, how she is progressing and changing from month to month, and what to do under these changes, we make life considerably easier for the mother-to-be," Mrs. Capes says.

POSTURE IS KEY

"For example, many pregnant women lose their figures because they don't move properly and put undue stress and strain on their waists, back and legs when they try to rise from a lying position.

"Simply, she should bend her knees, roll over onto her side and push up with the arms. The movement will be graceful and effortless no matter how large she may be."

Mrs. Findlay says good posture is the best all-round exercise.

"A good check of posture can be made by fitting your spine against the wall. Stand with heels about two inches from the wall, bend forward slightly at the waist—your lower back should come into contact with the wall—pull tummy, muscles in to keep this contact as you gradually straighten up.

"The hollow between your back and the wall should not increase until nearly the end of pregnancy. And it won't provide you keep the weight of the baby in your pelvis."

The book devotes a chapter to the father-to-be, saying it's perfectly normal for a wife to be depressed or tired during pregnancy and even after the baby is delivered.

SEVEN MONTH WILT

"You've heard of the seven-month itch," Mrs. Findlay says. "Well, an expectant mother also experiences what we call the seven-month wilt. By that time, she is thoroughly bored with being pregnant. She feels as though she has always been pregnant and will be pregnant forever.

"Why by the time she reaches full-term she's carrying 14 extra pounds around all day. Let a man carry 14 extra pounds of sugar around for 24 hours and he'll understand why his wife gets tired and irritable."

"There's no need to fear childbirth," says Mrs. Capes.

"Relaxation is what a girl needs most in labor. Our book tells the pregnant woman how to relax both throughout her pregnancy and through the final stages of labor and delivery."

Two sets of twins in Saanich's pioneer Butler family are having plenty of opportunity to get acquainted these days. Mr. Lawrence Butler bounces 10-month-old Catherine Jerne-wall on his knee while his twin, Mr. Claude Butler looks on

TWINS BRING JOY TO SAANICH

By PAT DUFOUR

Two little girls were born in a Cologne Hospital 10 months ago. With their birth another chapter of Saanich's history was written.

Sound improbable? Not when the blue-eyed twins are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Michel O. Jernevall. Their mother is the former Claudia Butler, member of the well-known family that helped build Saanich out of a wilderness, and which has created a dynasty that has left its mark on the whole of Vancouver Island.

This holiday season found the Jernevall family flying from Germany to Victoria to join in the merry-making and give the babies' great-grandmother, Mrs. Claude (Pearl) Butler Sr., her first glimpse of the winsome twosome.

She herself bore twins, but under very different circumstances. Her first two children, Claude and Lawrence, were born in 1911 on the Butler estate, arriving more than two months before they were due.

Dr. Fraser, the family doctor, was back east. In a hurry, the Butler family enlisted the help of the Saanich midwife, Mrs. Walker, and, with her assistance, another doctor.

By the time he'd arrived at the house, Claude had already made his appearance and his proud mother tried to tell the doctor he was a mile late for the birth. Instead, he informed her that he was in plenty of time for the next one!

TOOK HIS TIME

His diagnosis was correct. It was half an hour before Lawrence made his debut.

Mrs. Butler Sr. was to later bear three more children, all one at a time. They are Eric, who lives in Sooke and is the grandfather of the latest set of twins; Thomas, and Mrs. Cecil (Dorothy) Day, both of Victoria.

When Claude and Lawrence were born, Mrs. Butler and her doctor had no idea that it was to be a double birth. They weighed only three pounds apiece and the doctor gave little hope that Lawrence would live through the night. Today, he towers over his senior twin.

Incubators were unknown in those days so Mrs. Butler, her mother and the midwife improvised an incubator of their own. The first night the midwife kept one of the babies warmly cosseted in her lap. The next day, a big English-style pram was bought. The babies were placed in it, banked on each side by every hot water bottle the household could muster.

It's hard to believe that Mrs. Butler Sr. will be 82 in March. She has a flair for clothes that some younger women might envy, and an even more precious flair, that of creating an atmosphere of warmth and love around her. Both her twins insist that this was the most important contribution to their healthy growth after their premature appearance into the world.

The Butler roots grow deep into the soil of Saanich. The first Butler to settle here was Capt. George Stephen Butler, who arrived in May, 1862. He'd done quite a stint of

Country Manor Becomes School

WELLSBOROUGH, England (CP)—A handsome country house near this East Midlands town has been made part of a national system of institutes combining country leisure with new ventures in adult education.

The house is known as Knuston Hall and parts of it date from 1666 or earlier. Like two dozen other such centres in Britain, it is classified as "a short-term residential adult education college" and offers short courses ranging from archeology to gardening.

Students at the college, ranging in age from 18 to 80, live in for the duration of their courses, which usually last for a weekend or several days.

With women in the majority, Knuston students usually pay about $7.25 for learning in residence, and close to $30 for a full week.

The courses lead to no degrees or certificates. The aim is strictly intellectual stimulus for its own sake, in a setting designed to please.

OTHER COURSES

Knuston can accommodate about 40 students at one time. In addition to courses open to all, it offers refresher courses for specializing teachers and industrial managers.

One of the scheduled "open" courses aims at giving older people new ideas for winter pastimes. A local teacher with experience of winters in Canada has been called in to lecture on how the snowy months are spent there.

Instruction in music, painting and literature also is included among future Knuston offerings, as is a course on the study of animal bones found on archeological sites.

history-making before he arrived on Vancouver Island.

Assigned to a regiment that had its headquarters in India, Capt. Butler was in the memorable charge of the Light Brigade during the Crimean War.

When his regiment was posted to Quebec he decided to return to England. There he heard about the Cariboo gold rush and decided to head in that direction. His daughter-in-law, Mrs. Butler Sr., reports that he didn't make a fortune prospecting, but did well in his role of toll keeper.

The gold-fever out of his system, Capt. Butler decided to settle on 106 acres in Saanich, little realizing that this act would be the beginning of a family business that would spread out to encompass other parts of Vancouver Island.

After settling in Saanich, he sent for his English sweetheart, Miss Fanny Catherine Brett, who lived with Bishop Cridge and his wife while their marriage plans were finalized.

UNASSUMING WOMEN

Although Mrs. Pearl Butler is obviously the pivot around which her family generates, she'll take little credit for the happiness which fills every corner of her home on Keating Cross Road.

Modestly, she'll disclaim any right to be proud and tell you that the family warmth and character is obviously one of the legacies of her late mother-in-law.

"Fanny Butler was one of the most beloved women in the most beloved families in England, she became the first teacher in Saanich to be employed by the provincial government, and the first music teacher in the municipality. Everybody in our family is musical."

Capt. Butler was not a long-lived man. He died at 51. The Butler concern for family is seen in the provisions made in his will.

He appointed his two brothers as executors of the estate. They were Major Butler, who won a Victoria Cross in India, and Sir Thomas Butler of Bury Lodge, Kent, England.

GOOD GUIDES

They guided the Captain's family well. Today, all four of his grandsons are helping to preserve and increase the family interests. But, busy as they are, they're always eager to find time when other members of the family call.

Claude, who manages the family store on Keating Cross Road, was so excited when he heard about the birth of the latest set of twins, he dropped everything and flew to Germany. He came back with colored snapshots, intriguing and numerous enough to whet the curiosity of the other members of the family almost beyond endurance.

The Jernevals head back for Germany next week. Michel Jernevall manages an advertising agency in the German city.

When they go, both sets of twins will find it hard to take leave of each other.

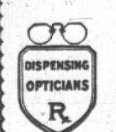

Knowing the Butler family, it won't be too long before the family circle at Saanich is complete again. They're that kind of people.

MOST COMMON ERROR

Don't Let That Pup Confuse Your Mind

By KARIN MOSER

MONTREAL (CP) — The most common error people make when they set out to buy a dog is to choose the cute, sad-looking puppy sitting quietly in the corner of the dog pen, says Nigel Aubrey-Jones, a breeder of world champion show dogs.

"While most of the puppies are frisking about and yelping for attention, the potential owner's heart goes out to the little sad one in the corner."

What they don't realize is that the pup may be melancholy and quiet because his health isn't right. If a pup is in good health his tail will be up, his eyes bright and alert and he'll frisk about.

"A puppy should know no fear when he's young. If he cowers, something is wrong with him."

Temperament is also important, Mr. Aubrey-Jones says. Is the dog friendly, proud, frisky, demanding? It will need all these characteristics if you want the dog to belong to you instead of to you.

"Evaluate your own personality. Do you want affection from a dog, lots of it? Then a poodle is your best bet. Not only does the poodle respond readily to training, he's intelligent and will stop at nothing to please you. They don't shed, which is why they must be clipped periodically, and they won't eat you out of house and home."

PEKINGESE LOYAL

Mr. Aubrey-Jones recommends a pekingese for people who want a dog that is loyal, intelligent but relatively unobtrusive.

"One of the characteristics of the pekingese is his unassuming manner. He'll mind his own business for most of the day. If you want to play with him he's certainly responsive but he's not one to jump and frolic all over you when you've had enough."

"He listens attentively, is a thinker, to say the least, has the heart of a lion—his ancestry traces back to the gigantic Chinese Fo—yet he's a cuddly, plush animal."

Mr. Aubrey-Jones brought out 18-month-old St. Aubrey Goffus Brescia, a pekingese who has already won a number of ribbons and "is probably going to be one of the greatest show dogs in the world."

As Brescia strutted on the table, proud and elegant, his owner reached for a can of spray and began to use it. Hair spray?

"Not exactly. It's a perfumed conditioner that fluffs up the dog's coat and keeps it looking orderly and healthy. The dog smells good, too."

WATCH FEEDING

Knowing how to feed a puppy during his first few months is important.

"Regardless of breed, every dog until the age of four months requires four meals a day. These should be small but nutritious and should include two milk feeds and two consisting mainly of meat. Milk should include pabulum cereal to form a gruel, with an egg yolk added from time to time."

"One meat meal should be raw hamburger while the main meal should consist of cooked meat with biscuit or meal added."

From four to six months, three meals are enough, omitting one of the milk feeds. From six to 12 months, reducing feeding to two meals a day. After that a dog can live happily on one meal plus a mid-afternoon biscuit snack.

To housebreak your pet put him outside or on a newspaper for a few minutes first thing in the morning, immediately after he has eaten, after sleeping and the last thing at night.

You should begin to train your dog to walk on a lead at about 10 to 12 weeks of age. Have the dog wear a collar at home to get used to it. Never pull him if he's shy or stubborn; coax him with a tidbit until he responds.

You Use Only Tiny Darts For Fitting Front of Skirt

Dear Eunice Farmer: I just finished my first dress in years with a waistline seam and was very unhappy with the results. The skirt was very full below the darts in the front. The fabric was silk and couldn't be steamed in to fit.

Since I had already pressed the darts and the marks wouldn't come out, I simply ripped one of the darts out and made a seam down the side fronts taking out the excess fabric. The skirt looks great now, but there must be another way.—Mrs. M. A.

Dear Mrs. M. A.: You have made the mistake so many women make when it comes to darts. You should never use two darts in the front of your skirt unless they are very tiny. Darts are simply an aid to fitting; the deeper the dart, the more shape you will have. It stands to reason that the front of a skirt should be smooth, only your back has a shaping 7 inches below the waist.

Skirt darts in front should never be more than 3/4 inches long and should be about 1/4 inch deep, no more. If you have a large tummy, it is best to eliminate the darts. Then stitch two rows of stitching with the longest stitch and gently pull up the ease until it fits the waistline without adding excess fabric to the front of the skirt.

Complexion Beauty

The secret of beautifying the complexion is said to lie in the saturation of the skin with a new type of tropical moist oil. The skin takes on an immediate healthy bloom as the tiny lines and blemishes are gently smoothed away. This saturation treatment with the moist oil of Olay is recommended by skin care consultants, who advise its daily use as a powder base to give the complexion day-long beauty. Your druggist will help you to obtain a supply for your personal needs.

Baird in Finance; Shift for Frampton

By JIM HUME

The season to be jolly may be over, but how about one last chuckling swing as we pen the first column of 1968?

Please bear in mind that my record as a forecaster is already established at a most dismal level.

But, with Mayor Hugh Stephen scheduled to make his inaugural address Monday and at the same time announce his committee appointments for the next year, a little speculation is too tempting to pass by.

You see when Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow was defeated on Dec. 9 the voters also crossed off the chairman of the city's finance committee, which, with a budget of $16 million plus to administer, is a fairly responsible job.

Now, if you were the mayor, who would you pop into that little spot?

There are two men on city council who make their living dabbling with figures.

One is Ald. Percy Frampton, an accountant, the other is Ald. Robert Baird, an investment dealer.

Of the two Ald. Baird has the seniority on council—and that's why my calculated prognostication is that he will get the nod for the finance committee spot.

Other changes? If I were mayor, which thank heaven for all concerned I'm not, I'd move Ald. Frampton out of the convention centre committee slot and bang in somebody like Ald. Hugh Ramsay.

During the controversy on the convention centre site last year Ald. Frampton appeared to lose a little of his poise as an unbiased chairman. I don't think Ald. Ramsay would. He's a man of strong opinions, true, but he also has the knack and the ability to bring balanced and uncluttered judgments to the council table.

If we do that with Ald. Ramsay though, what do we do with the committee for recreation and community services of which Ald. Ramsay is the chairman now?

How about moving Ald. Frampton over to that spot? A sort of a fair exchange.

I am not forecasting any changes in public works with Ald. Cecil Parrott as committee chairman. Ald. Parrott is on familiar ground there and serves well.

Neither would I be tempted to move Ald. Ian Stewart from the chairmanship of the planning and zoning committee where, during the past year, he has shown an excellent grasp of what can often be complicated situations.

One last shuffle which I almost forgot. If Ald. Baird does go to finance, who will replace him?

Radios Bought With Bad Cheques

A man who wrote worthless cheques to buy two radios last month was sentenced to a four-month term Friday.

John McLennan, 30, of 1011 Pandora, had pleaded guilty Thursday to the two charges of false pretences.

Court was told he wrote bad cheques for $57.90 and $36.88 between Dec. 18 and 21 to obtain the merchandise.

He received concurrent four-month sentences on each charge. His criminal history includes several convictions for similar offences.

as chairman of the parks and beautification committee?

How about Ald. Lloyd Clarkson who had fairly light responsibilities during his first year on council and, if he can find the time, should be ready for more onerous tasks?

Well that's my list. All we have to do now is wait for Mayor Stephen to shatter my shaky crystal ball on Monday.

Having started this piece with a gaggle of forecasts we may as well go whole hog.

This will be Ald. Ramsay's last year on council.

About 11 months from now he will announce that pressure of business prevents him from devoting to council business the time demanded.

Ald. Clarkson could make the same decision. The forecast on Ald. Clarkson, a navy man, isn't as bold as the Ald. Ramsay one because the youthful naval officer is enjoying his council work and would like to take another run for a two-year term.

But time again could be the factor, and I think it will.

Few people realize just what the demands on an alderman are until they take their seats around the council chamber horseshoe. It only takes a couple of committee meetings a week to foul up a man's occupation.

One last look, this for city hall staffers in general:

Look for the posting of a terse memo from the city manager reminding you all that a 10-minute coffee break in the morning and another 10 minutes in the afternoon is considered adequate.

And don't start crying that you only take 10 minutes. Believe it or not, newspaper reporters can count up to 10.

The memo should also have some sharp comments for the parks department crew which took a 10-minute coffee break a couple of weeks ago.

They ignored the coffee shop a few yards from where they were working and merrily jogged, in a city truck, 12 to 15 blocks to a more favored watering hole. The coffee was only a dime at the place of their choice as compared with the 15 cents at the readily available bar. Time, gas and the use of a city-owned vehicle were apparently not considered.

Gentlemen, the news is bad. You were not only noticed, but timed.

No complaints when the lash falls, please.

SHIP LOSS ESTIMATED AT $1 MILLION

Loss of more than $1,000,000 has been unofficially estimated in the sinking of the 9,600-ton Dutch freighter Schiedyk which went down Thursday off Bligh Island on Vancouver Island's west coast.

Final decision to abandon the pulp-carrying vessel to the underwriters was expected to be made today by a top official of the ship's owners, Holland-America Lines, from Rotterdam. He was due at Gold River today.

Plake of Victoria said the possibility of salvage could not be ruled out but the decision rested with the owners and underwriters.

A small part of the ship's hull shows above water at high tide. The hulk is in 100 feet of water about 100 feet from the shore of Bligh Island in Nootka Sound's Murchat Inlet.

If abandoned it would probably be left where it lies, almost bottom-up, Capt. Tait said. There is a fairly steep drop-off to 300 feet of water near where the ship lies. It is not a hazard to navigation, he said.

Capt. Tait said divers found three-quarters of the hull ripped.

Tugs were standing by the hulk to protect it and Tahsis RCMP reported no problem with boaters seeking cargo or equipment that might have floated loose. Little or no debris was reported in the area.

Preliminary inquiry by the transport department into the accident was scheduled for Vancouver today.

You may find some harder to spot than others.

There aren't many games you can win every time. Here's an exception: Two persons play. Fourteen matches are placed on the table. Each player, drawing by turns, may take from the pile one, two or three matches, never more than three. The idea is to make your rival pick up the last match. The winner-to-be has merely to remember two things: First, that he must get the fifth match drawn; and second, that on his next draw, after he gets the fifth match, he leaves five matches on the table. Then, when his opponent picks up one, two or three matches, he coolly draws all but one, leaving that for his rival and thereby winning the game.

TESTING

Repeata loud rapidly; Thelma takes to tuba tooting, Fossie toots a flute, Tina trills a trumpet, Sara ceaselessly thrashes cymbals.
Six surly snails slid slowly southward.

FIND MISSING YEAR?

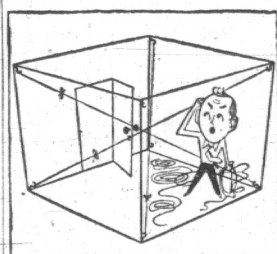

Kidder had been consulting

"Do any of you fellows know anything about the Gregorian Calendar, the astronomical year, the Old Style and New Style of figuring dates, and so on?" he asked. Nobody seemed to know.

"Well, I just tumbled to a rather interesting fact. On my last birthday I was 25. Unless I've figured wrong — and I don't see how I could — I'll be 27 on my next birthday."

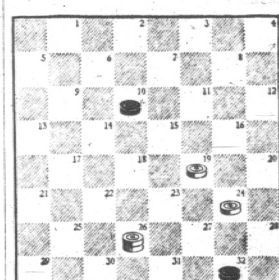

Everybody in the office said Kidder was cockeyed, though one of the girls pointed out that 1968 is Leap Year. What's the answer — for Kidder was right?

CAUGHT BY THIS TIE-UP?

You are in a room 10 feet on a side and 10 feet high. You are given a bundle of 10-foot strings to connect the most remote corners and the stretching makes up for the cutting and tying. How many 10-foot lengths would you need?

CHIP-DOWN CHECKER TEST

Is it too late for White to swing a haymaker that will stop his opponent cold? Not exactly, but White's clincher is comprised of a one-two punch. White side, moving up the board, to move first and win in just three moves is the challenge. See if you can meet it.

Long-time checker king Mildard Hopper suggests the solution below. No fair peeking.

Solution: White 19-15, Black 19-12, White 2-22, Black 13-9. That's all you need to move and the game is over.

NO, NO!

All banks are not alike read the slogan of a large financial institution. Ah, ha! We must disagree. Two of the banks above are exactly alike. We're sure of this because we asked the artist to draw them that way. Which two qualify as twins? Study details carefully, then see if you can decide.

Incidentally, speaking of banks, see if you can answer this riddle:

In what way are a bank teller and a singer alike? Give up! Both give out notes! Hear, hear!

STAR NUMBERS

Challenge: Fill the empty circles above with the numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 so that the sum of all rows is seventeen.

Fish and game laws require that a certain fish three inches or less in length be thrown back when hooked or netted. If a fisherman catches one of these species two inches and a half long will he have to throw it back?

Mayor, Aldermen Charged

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Maurice Bergeron of St. Michel and four of the suburb's six aldermen Friday were committed to trial on several municipal corruption charges involving 19 counts of soliciting or accepting bribes.

Judge Paul Hurteau said Friday prosecutor Gerard Beaudry, former chief counsel and barrister for the St. Michel police department, submitted sufficient evidence at the preliminary hearing, which began Dec. 11, to warrant trials for the five municipal officials. No trial date was set.

Sent to trial along with the mayor were aldermen Maurice Constantineau, Gerard Caron, Louis Patenaude and Wilfrid Rochon.

A sixth accused, Maurice Labossiere, was committed to trial on a conspiracy charge in connection with the affair.

The charges arise from allegations that the accused accepted kickbacks from persons awarded city contracts and bribes from persons seeking various municipal permits or positions on the suburb's police and fire departments.

EPIDEMIC ENDING ON BRITISH FARMS

LONDON (Reuters)—A disastrous foot-and-mouth animal epidemic, which struck more than 2,200 British farms after starting in October, appears to be nearing its end.

The agriculture ministry announced that no new cases were confirmed in the 19 hours up to midday today. There were only six outbreaks in the previous 24 hours—the lowest figure since the first week of the epidemic.

Tshombe To Be Released?

ALGIERS (AP) — Unofficial but usually-reliable sources in Algiers said today that former Congo premier Moïse Tshombe may soon be released from prison and expelled from Algeria. Official sources all say they have no knowledge of such plans.

The sources indicating that Tshombe probably will be released added it is expected he would be taken to the military air field at Boufarik in secrecy and sent to an undisclosed destination.

Tshombe was arrested last June 30 after his private plane was hijacked on a trip between the Spanish islands of Ibiza and Mallorca and forced to land in Algeria.

The Congo immediately asked for his extradition.

CRACK DOWN
Federal highway police in Mexico City have been ordered to crack down on drivers travelling at night with defective tail lights and headlights because a major road hazard in Mexico is unlighted vehicles.

Whites Join Tribute To Donor of Heart

CAPE TOWN (UP)—The biggest funeral crowd in Cape Town history, a racially mixed throng of 6,000 including many whites paid an emotional tribute today to the mulatto factory worker who gave his heart so a white dentist might live.

The surging crowd, so big police used dogs at one point to restore order, cheered and applauded as Dr. Christiaan Barnard arrived in 90-degree summertime heat at the funeral of 24-year-old Clive Haupt.

Women, some weeping, pushed forward to touch the pioneering surgeon. He appeared embarrassed.

Thousands of Cape Town's colored (mixed blood) population, en route to annual Mardi Gras-style 'carnival' celebrations paused for a minute of silent tribute to Haupt, who died of a stroke at a beach a few hours before the transplant operation.

Groups of people stood silently along the three-mile route from the church to segregated Wilmot Cemetery where Haupt was buried. More than 2,000 persons gathered at the graveside and for a time hampered pallbearers from bringing the body for burial.

A minister called for volunteers to carry the casket and Mayor Gerald Ferry stepped forward with friends of Haupt. The largely colored crowd murmured approval.

Dr. Barnard, Mayor Ferry and members of Haupt's family tossed rose petals on the coffin as it was lowered into the grave.

Haupt's widow, Dorothy, broke down, sobbing, "Clive! Clive!"

The crowd was so dense it backed up traffic for a mile in every direction and police finally brought in dogs. No one was hurt but screams swept the crowd as people fled the dogs.

BLAIBERG 'CHEERFUL'

Negro Man Next?

CAPE TOWN (AP)—Dr. Philip Blaiberg was reported in satisfactory condition and cheerful today after his heart-transplant operation.

The head of the South African operating team said he now wants to do a heart transplant on a Negro.

On the fifth day with his new heart, the 58-year-old dentist is "enjoying life better now than before the operation," Dr. Christiaan N. Barnard said. "Even if he only lives for days, he's had that."

"We've given him something," Barnard told a press conference he now wants to perform an operation on a colored man suffering from a disease that affects only the heart and leaves the rest of the body free of complications usually found in whites. Blacks are segregated in white-ruled South Africa.

This progressive disease, cardiac myopathy, is mostly found in Negroes and is responsible for a high percentage of their heart fatalities, he said.

Siamese Twins Separated By South African Doctors

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters)—Surgeons at the Transvaal Memorial Hospital for Children in this South African city today successfully separated Siamese twins joined at the head, a hospital spokesman announced.

The white twins, Catherine and Shirley O'Hare, were born in October by caesarian delivery.

The hospital superintendent said the twins were in satisfactory condition, but still on the danger list.

The operation, performed by a 27-man surgical team, lasted five hours.

"The twins stood the surgical procedure well," the statement said.

The twins were born two weeks premature Oct. 6, to Joyce O'Hare, 23. The father is a Johannesburg businessman.

The success of the operation could be another first for South Africa's surgical teams, who in the last month performed two heart-transplant operations.

Two previous attempts to separate Siamese twins joined at the head were only partially successful. In each case one of the twins died shortly after.

When Catherine and Shirley were born, they were fed through tubes for eight days.

Medical sources said the twins shared scalp, underlying tissue and possibly part of the skull.

They were otherwise normal, the hospital said, and weighed about 5½ pounds at birth.

Officer, Bandit Wounded

VANCOUVER (CP)—A young bandit lay semi-conscious in Vancouver General Hospital today, a few yards away from a police constable who was gunned down in a dramatic shoot-out Friday.

Police said they expected to charge the 26-year-old gunman with attempted murder of Constable Stanley Blackstock, 37, and robbery of the Vancouver City Savings and Credit Union.

Hospital officials described both men as being in fair condition.

Traffic Patrolman Blackstock received a bullet wound to the chest. The gunman was shot four times.

Hospital officials said Blackstock was in surgery for two hours while doctors located and removed a bullet from his right lung.

Doctors performed a tracheotomy on the gunman so he could breathe while he was receiving emergency treatment. A medical team spent five hours with him in the operating room during which time they found four bullet wounds but no bullets.

SUFFERED MANY WOUNDS

Surgeons repaired a severed artery in the bandit's right shoulder and wired his jaw, which also was hit. Other wounds were to the right thigh and right hand.

An armed man entered the credit union Friday afternoon and demanded money while he held a shiny revolver at a customer, three Credit Union employees and a private detective.

"That's right, it's the second time in two months," the armed man told Detective Dick Best, hired by the company after two previous holdups.

The gunman got $1,675 in small bills, then fled, with Detective Best and another credit union employee in pursuit.

Driving his car, Best overtook the bandit, who was on foot. Best was forced to give up the chase when the gunman began shooting. The man left in an old-model car.

Const. Blackstock, who happened to be patrolling the area, followed the bandit's car and cornered it at a dead-end street. The bandit's car skidded to a halt, then reversed and crashed into the constable's car.

TOOK DEAD AIM

An eye-witness, Mrs. H. E. C. Deane-Freeman, said that as the bandit got out of his car, he pointed his gun at the policeman's chest. They were eight feet apart.

The policeman was shot as he got out of the car. Then the constable began to fire. Although hit four times by police bullets, the young bandit scrambled a steep hill, fell over a fence, got up and hobbled up a nearby lane into hiding.

The constable staggered back to his patrol car and radioed for assistance and an ambulance.

After eluding police for about 20 minutes, the gunman lurched from his hiding spot and fell on a lawn, almost at the feet of searching policemen.

Name of the wounded gunman was withheld.

A credit union official later said that the bandit who got the $1,675 Friday was the same one who had held up the office twice in the previous two months.

At police headquarters, the first news that Blackstock had been shot came when the officer asked for an emergency ambulance. "Is the suspect wounded?" the dispatcher asked.

"I'm shot," said Blackstock. "Please get an ambulance here right away. The suspect got away."

CHINH

Anti-U.S. General On 'Leave'

SAIGON (AP)—An anti-American general who commands the division rated the least capable South Vietnamese unit in the war has been ordered to take an extended sick leave, military sources reported today.

A reliable senior military source said the general probably would not return to his command.

Brig-General Pham Truong Chinh, who has been quoted as saying his 25th Division "is probably the worst division anywhere in the world," is to begin the sick leave Jan. 15, sources said.

Chinh was not known to be ill and recently completed a division-wide inspection tour. He went by road rather than request a U.S. Army helicopter.

FAMED DOCTOR INDICTED FOR ANTI-DRAFT EFFORTS

'No Qualms About Going to Jail'

BOSTON (AP)—Dr. Benjamin Spock, Yale university chaplain William Sloane Coffin Jr., and three other opponents of U.S. policy in Vietnam, have been indicted on charges of conspiring to counsel young men to avoid the U.S. military draft.

"I have no qualms about going to jail," Spock, the 64-year-old author of numerous books on baby care, said at a press conference in his New York City apartment after a federal grand jury returned the indictments in Boston Friday.

"This trial will better dramatize the illegal and immoral war and if this trial will further my efforts to stop it, so much the better," Spock said.

Also indicted with Spock and the New Haven, Conn., chaplain were Marcus Raskin, 33, of Washington, D.C., co-director of the Institute for Policy Studies; Mitchell Goodman, 44, an author from New York City and Temple, and Michael Ferber, 23, of Boston, a graduate student at Harvard University.

Raskin was a White House aide for a time in the Kennedy administration in the office of McGeorge Bundy, special assistant to the president for national security affairs.

Vietnam Gas Claim Probed

OTTAWA (CP)—The director of Canada's medical aid program in Vietnam may be asked for an official report on his allegations that the U.S. has used lethal gas in the war.

A spokesman in the external affairs department said today the statements by Dr. Alje Vennema, 35, contained in a letter to a Montana professor of zoology, will be studied by External Affairs Minister Martin.

Although Dr. Vennema had not made the allegations in his official capacity, Mr. Martin would have to decide whether they concern the position of the Canadian government, the spokesman said.

Dr. Vennema is a Dutch-born physician who lived in Burlington, Ont., before he went to Indochina independently three years ago. Later he took over a tuberculosis out-patient clinic 350 miles north of Saigon in Vietnam and began receiving supplies and other support from the Canadian external aid office.

Last summer he was named to head the Canadian medical effort in South Vietnam.

Dr. Vennema wrote Dr. E. W. Pfeiffer of the University of Montana that some Vietnamese civilians have died from the effects of gas being used by U.S. troops.

CLAIMS GASES KILLED

The letter is quoted as saying "some of the gases used in the field not only can cripple and kill but actually have done so." The mortality rate is stated as 90 per cent among children and 10 per cent among adults stricken by the gas.

The U.S. defence department has denied the allegations.

Science reporter William Hines reported the letter in the Washington Star without identifying Dr. Vennema. The Montana professor later identified Dr. Vennema as the doctor who wrote him.

The external affairs spokesman here said Dr. Vennema has been under no obligation to report—and has not in fact reported—medical findings to the Canadian government during his three years in the country.

Two Killed In Road Crash

BURNABY (CP)—Two teenagers were killed and five other persons sent to hospital in a two-car collision in North Burnaby today.

Dead are Earl Gordon Harvey, 18, and Joseph Vales Telie, 17, both of Burnaby.

The victims were in a car that carried four other young people, including two 14-year-old girls. The other four were not critically injured.

The driver of the second car also was taken to hospital.

Death Row Hunger Strike

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP)—Nearly half the condemned men on San Quentin prison's death row went on a hunger strike Friday, protesting the food and water.

Associate Warden James W. D. Park said 25 of the 63 men started the strike at breakfast and then turned down their last meal of the day, served at 2 p.m.

However, they won one of their points. Parks said the convict waiters wore clean aprons serving the afternoon meal.

Park said the meals sent to death row travel a long way from the prison kitchen and efforts will be made to keep the food warmer.

Conviction of conspiracy to violate the Selective Service Act carries a maximum penalty up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Li-Gen Lewis B. Hershey, director of the selective service system, said he takes "no pleasure in seeing anybody get indicted," but said the action, initiated by the justice department, was necessary because "if they are not guilty they ought to get a chance to show it and if they are, they ought to be punished."

The indictments listed 11 overt acts as a basis for the charges allegedly having taken place during four events. Coffin, Spock, Raskin and

The hope of every old-fashioned university administration is that the Berkeley bogey will stay far from its halls. But because of the arrival on all campuses of some startlingly new-fashioned students, I expect that the Berkeley incident will prove to have been merely the preliminary rumblings of an academic revolution.

As one who dislikes controversy and loud dissent, I hope it will proceed quietly. This is unlikely, however, since practically everything that youth undertakes is accompanied by a hellish amount of noise. In any case, it is now under way, and will continue until the dehumanized automat approach to education that provoked the California revolt has been replaced by something better.

Gains are going to be much more slowly achieved than the ardent advocates of change anticipate. But eventually, what I see as the university of the future will begin to emerge.

It will be neither a diploma mill nor a job-training school, and from it will come men and women competent to deal with a future that scares the hell out of me.

They will be involved, committed people, and I suspect they may not only save the world but make it a better abode.

You may have one of these new-fashioned students in your home. If so, I don't know whether to congratulate you or pity you, because they are a far remove from the uncomplicated Joe College of the past.

They call themselves activists, a term of Leftist flavor. Yet, in my experience of them, they scorn the regimentation of the Left.

Since they disown most of the traditions and comforting beliefs which our static culture has handed down to them, they are by no means easy to live with; in fact only their parents and other activists could possibly love them.

Their number is comparatively small — one estimate, which is almost certainly overgenerous, sets it at about 20 per cent of the university student body. But because they are ardent and angry and appallingly vocal, it is from the activists that our universities are beginning to take their tone.

I don't pretend to understand them, and am not sure that I even like them very much. Their idealistic-ideoclast view tends to bewilder a man of my generation. But I admire them in a puzzled sort of way, and approve their passion for change in a world that could use it.

As students, they are not content to regard their universities as extensions of the high schools.

They think that student representatives should have a place in administration.

They are eager to be rid of the examination system and to trade the set-piece lecture for the seminar at which the instructor is guide and catalyst, his function less to impart knowledge than to put minds to work.

I am afraid that, if they get their way, education is likely to take on some new dimensions.

It is natural that these formidable young boat-rockers and would-be disturbers of the status quo should be at their strongest in Canada's university press.

This pleases and also scandalizes me, since their language tends to be ungirded, and they frequently write as if haranguing from a soap box.

It is not my aim to romanticize these challengers of placidity, and I know that life's necessities will cool many of them.

But not, I trust, until they have established a beachhead for the next wave of disillusioned protesters against education as it is and the world as they find it.

Car's Headlights Off, Driver Pays $300

He pleaded guilty.

Continuing Blood Clinics May End Periodic Crises

By PETE LOUDON

Should blood donor clinics be set up in Victoria on a continuous basis?

Should hospitals establish blood collection centres to backstop Red Cross clinics? Is the day approaching when once again cash payments must be offered to donors?

These and similar questions will be discussed here soon by medical authorities representing both city hospitals and the B.C. section of the Canadian Red Cross.

The talks were planned following an emergency situation which developed both here and in Vancouver during the Christmas-New Year holiday.

A blood shortage threatened

postponement of vital operations here. The crisis was averted when 423 Victorians flocked to a clinic placed on emergency footing Thursday night.

Friday, servicemen at Canadian Forces Base Esquimalt further bolstered the diminishing supplies with a 318-pint donation.

(Service personnel consistently give blood beyond all proportion to their numbers in the community and have been largely responsible for avoiding many blood shortages in the past.)

Dr. K. R. Thornton, Royal Jubilee Hospital pathologist, Dr. Garth Walters of St. Joseph's Hospital and Dr. Terry Stout, medical director for the provincial blood bank at Vancouver, will meet to study measures aimed at placing blood donations on a more regular basis.

without lining up outside in the cold as was necessary during the crisis Thursday.

Perhaps greater publicity should be given to awards for continuing donors. Perhaps municipalities should move into this field of recognition which heretofore has been handled by the Red Cross itself.

Blood-letting is painless and brief and can be undertaken without harmful effect by any adult between teen-age and the mid-60s every three months. But is this widely enough known?

For many years donors were paid—usually about $5 a pint. Many of today's professional people helped put themselves through university by selling blood. The Canadian

Red Cross opposes this system and doctors generally shy from the suggestion—but continuing emergencies could demand a reappraisal.

The way it's done now, a blood donation is the one gift which costs the rich man as much as the poor man, no gift can be more personal and few are more important. Somehow, more people must be taught to see it that way.

'Prudent Stewardship' In Handling of Estate

Recent payment of a $200,000 executor's fee by Victoria city council was made against the advice of city solicitor T. P. O'Grady.

But the action was defended today against criticisms published elsewhere.

The story, told by a source close to the matter, is this:

On Dec. 5 the city of Victoria received a cheque for $2 million from Canada Trust Company. The sum represented the bulk of the city's legacy from the estate of the late Thomas Shanks McPherson.

The city was also presented with a bill for $200,000 for Canada Trust's administration of the estate over a five-year period.

City solicitor T. P. O'Grady

advised council to delay payment of the executor's bill. He said he had no doubts the account was accurate and audited. But he felt the amount might be deemed too high by a court decision.

Mr. O'Grady said the charge might not be in accord with the law governing the administration of estates. He thought the trust company should submit it for approval by counsel and until this was done the city should withhold payment.

Mayor Hugh Stephen absented himself from the discussion by council because he had served on the board which advised on the estate's administration, prior to assuming office as mayor. The balance of council voted to pay the account without question.

The anonymous source who related the story today said this circumstance has caused some criticism of council and the trust company, which he felt to be unwarranted.

FEE AUTHORIZED

He pointed out, and Mr. O'Grady also touched on this in his remarks to council, that the fee named by Canada Trust was laid down by the late Mr. McPherson.

He said in a memorandum that it should be 2 1/2 per cent of the capital realized and five per cent of income receipts.

Mr. O'Grady had told council this was not necessarily binding on the city however. He cited the case of a similar bequest to an Ontario city where the courts had reduced the fee from $375,000 to $149,000.

Victoria City council however was in receipt of a further memorandum from Mr. McPherson stating that he wanted no controversy in connection with his planned disposal of his estate, or the fee.

And council also took into consideration that any legal action to challenge the fee might cost as much as $15,000—and the action still be lost.

The aldermen also reportedly took into consideration that the fee laid down by Mr. McPherson was payment for not just administering the estate but for subsequent investments which increased the city's original legacy from $1 million to what will eventually total about $2.7 million.

"It was a prudent stewardship over a period of five years. Mr. O'Grady said this himself," said the informant.

The trust company also acted on behalf of 16 other beneficiaries, including the University of Victoria. None of them to date have questioned the rate at which the executor's fee was set.

It was also pointed out that the fee, when spread over the period of the administration, amounted to about five per cent per year—a rate acceptable or less than is normally charged for administration of other business interests.

Market Board To Force Hike In Egg Price

A 10 per cent increase in the price of eggs is expected this year.

A spokesman for producers said today the newly created B.C. egg marketing board, will seek to prevent overproduction which resulted last year in losses to the industry.

Egg surpluses caused prices to drop below the cost of production.

The board, the first of its kind in Canada, was established under the Natural Product (B.C.) Marketing Act. Its main purpose will be to adjust production to market requirements.

The act gives the board wide powers, such as authority to issue market quotas and to fix prices to be paid to producers.

Egg production will be controlled by seeing that not too many chicks are raised this spring.

Professor To Speak

Ninth annual United Church conference on evangelism will be held at the Island Hall, Parksville, Jan. 17 to 21.

Chief speaker will be Dr. Loren Halvorson of the American Lutheran Church, who is professor of sociology at Augsburg College, Minneapolis.

Theme of the conference will be Stress, Strategy and Structure for Mission. The conference is for clergy and laymen.

TREE FARM DECISION WITHIN MONTH

Forestry Minister Williston indicated Friday a decision will be handed down within a month on an application by Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. for a 261,000-acre tree farm licence on the British Columbia coast.

The minister gave the indication in an interview during a break in a day-long public hearing here on the company's bid for a licence covering Crown land on northern Vancouver Island, the Queen Charlotte Islands, and the Rivers Inlet area.

Delivery Delays Wiring Project

Expected completion date for underground wiring on Gorge Road between Admirals and Gorge View now is set for the end of March, Reeve Hugh Curtis said Friday.

Necessary underground works have been installed but the delay has involved delivery of electrical cable and other materials to go into the conduit. It is hoped the utility poles will come down by early April, he said.

Possession Not Proved By Crown

A lengthy drug trial in central court Friday ended with dismissal of the charges over the legal issue of possession.

Phillip Isaacson, 20, of 1032 McGregor, had been charged with possession of marijuana and of cannabis (resin) after a police raid on his apartment Dec. 15.

When six officers from the RCMP, city and Saanich police and a city policewoman walked into the accused's three-room apartment, they found 11 people there, court was told Friday.

Police found a "joint," (marijuana cigarette) under a bed, a pipe with marijuana residue in the bowl and a small bag of marijuana.

'SOLE RENTER' Isaacson was charged after he told officers he was "the sole renter" of the suite.

In his ruling Magistrate Ostler said a person who rents an apartment is not necessarily the occupant or the sole occupant.

No evidence of the length of tenancy was offered, he added. The drug could have been on the premises a long time.

"A case of this kind presents extreme difficulty for the officers of the Crown," he said in his summary, leading to dismissal.

Shift Systems Or Year Round?

Freeze to Force Trustee Decision

By DON VIPOND
Education Reporter

The Greater Victoria school system and its 30,000 pupils are at the brink of a classroom shortage which could mean shifts or year-round terms beginning next September.

School board chairman Peter Bunn said today the district is almost at "the point of no return" for building needed accommodation by the fall.

Under the provincial government's current freeze on all but "essential" classroom construction, over $3,000,000 worth of building plans are stalled at the department of education.

"We've got to get release on quite a lot of stuff almost immediately," said Mr. Bunn. "If we don't, it's inevitable that shifts will become a reality in September."

PREPARING REPORT A detailed survey of current facilities is being prepared to show the board exactly where it stands, said the chairman.

Then it will settle what crisis measures it will take to squeeze pupils into classes.

A shift system means classrooms are used twice during the same school day, said Mr. Bunn. Possibly half the school population would attend classes between 8 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. with the next shift between 1 and 5 p.m. It doesn't mean teachers teach twice.

Shifts produce a sub-standard teaching situation, he said.

DISRUPTED "It means the over-all life of the school is grossly disrupted. It means there is very little extra-curricular activity. Choirs, drama and sports, this sort of thing, go by the board. The mechanics of the situation just don't permit them."

Shifts turn schools into "teaching factories, instead of educating the whole child."

Related cultural activities are important in education, said the chairman.

He summarized the effect of shifts on schools this way:

"You open the windows, try and change the air, and then another gang comes in. It's just not desirable."

On the possibility of other measures, including schools open year-round, Mr. Bunn said he believed it was the obligation of the school board to assess every avenue, including this one.

BEST SYSTEM "It's our duty to maintain the very best possible system. We've got to look at every possibility and come up with the best answer."

Plans dating from last August are being held by the department of education.

"The plans are completed. All we want is the okay to go to tender."

Time has all but run out, he said. It takes a month to complete the tendering functions and another month to clear up other administrative needs.

"That only leaves seven months for building. Some of our projects couldn't be done in that time. Some could."

FOR YESTERDAY

The district's school construction program is not a plan for tomorrow but for yesterday, he said.

"The logical way is to build for expansion, for tomorrow."

No business could operate the way the government is forcing the educational system to go, he claimed.

Mr. Bunn said he agreed completely with the views of Campbell River school board chairman Bruce Saunders who said recently his district faces a "bleak" 18 months in education.

"Because of the present freeze by the provincial government on building programs in the school districts we are going to have to look seriously at the semester system, school on a 12-month basis and teacher aides," said Mr. Saunders following election to his third term as chairman.

"We must do this if we want to maintain our present teacher-pupil ratio. I don't know how we are going to do it but if any school district in the country can do it, we can."

Ask The Times

Q. I would like to join the Consumers' Association of Canada; could you give me their address and the fee required. F.M.G.

A. The association's address is 100 Gloucester St., Ottawa 4, Ontario and the fee is $3. This entitles you to a year's subscription to the Canadian Consumer magazine, according to local publicity director for the association, Mrs. V. F. Ball.

Q. Could you tell me please if they accept women in the armed services in the United States and if so, to whom would I have to write.

A. Yes, they do. For the U.S. Army write the Armed Forces Examining and Induction Station, 1519 Alaskan Way South, Seattle. For the Air Force, write the USAF Recruiting Centre, 6405 Roosevelt Way NE in Seattle. And for the Navy, write their recruiting centre at 2223-2nd St., Seattle.

BUSINESS VIEWS

Ultra-Modern Car Premises To Open Soon

By AB KENT
Business Editor

One of the most modern—and certainly Victoria's most impressive—automobile dealerships is due to come on stream March 1.

This is the architecturally pleasing Empress Pontiac Buick Ltd. under construction on North Douglas where Green Lumber recently stood.

President and general manager David Lawson said effort is being made to have the new premises open March 1, which would represent something like three months of intense construction activity.

The building is marked by a show-room-office section closest to Douglas Street, made distinctive by hanging open woodwork over the top of high windows, which are suspended from projecting eaves.

This area, providing 2,500 square feet of showroom, will be linked with the service and mechanical building by a 55-foot service reception canopy with access on Topaz.

The whole layout is in an L-shape running back to Quesnel Street, providing for flexibility of use.

A former president of the American Institute of Mining, Metallurgical and Petroleum Engineers now retired in Victoria will give the institute's annual lecture on extractive metallurgy in New York next month.

He is Ronald Russell McNaughton, an industrial consultant on non-ferrous metal production, who served Cominco for 41 years prior to retiring in 1965.

AIME is holding its meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel Feb. 25-29, and Mr. McNaughton's presentation, The Lead Smelter Today, will be given Feb. 28.

It will deal with changes in lead smelting that have occurred in the last 30 years, describing the essential steps in detail and touching on subsidiary activities.

On his retirement Mr. McNaughton was manager of Cominco's metallurgical division, in charge of all non-ferrous metal production. He started with the company as an assayer in 1924.

A fellow of the Metallurgical Society of AIME, Mr. McNaughton was the institute's president in 1961.

Unlike some other businesses that do both over-the-counter and mail-order merchandising, Simpsons-Sears actively promote both from a single location.

This interesting aspect of the retail trade was underlined by J. C. Barrow, chairman of the department store chain which next year will be out to capture its share of the Victoria market for the first time.

Simpsons-Sears mail-order business is well established in Victoria and shows gains consistently.

When the new store is opened at Hillside Shopping Centre complex, it will have a prominent mail order office, not played down to give the best possible enhancement to the counter trade.

As Mr. Barrow explains, Simpsons-Sears find the two facets of the business are "married to each other." The company has found that when a retail store is opened in a centre served previously by mail order office, the volume of mail orders increases.

Asked to comment on a rival's estimate that in order to make a go of the new project Simpsons-Sears will have to do a minimum of $5 million net in its first year of operation, Mr. Barrow said: "A good guess—maybe a bit low."

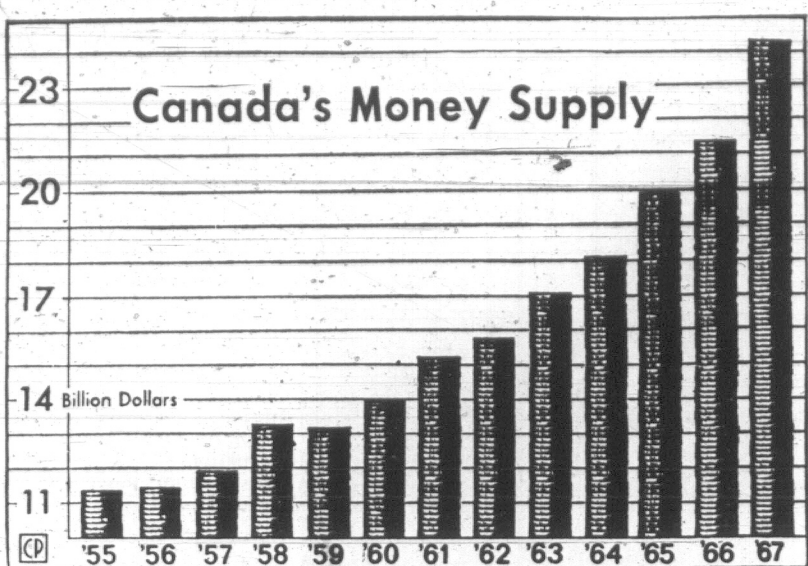

But he said projections of market prepared by the company would have to remain confidential.

Meanwhile the Simpsons-Sears warehouse will be rushed to completion in Saanich to provide both a distribution centre for the existing mail order operation and a base for the finishing work that will follow the main part of store construction.

MONEY in circulation outside banks, chartered bank deposits held by the general public and Canadian government deposits in chartered banks amounted to $24,278,000,000 by the end of 1967, higher than in any other year, and a hefty jump from the $21,296,000,000 for the same period in 1966. Imperial-Commerce Tops

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce has passed the Royal Bank of Canada for the first time in their battle to show the highest assets in the country's banking system.

The Canada Gazette today showed assets of the Canadian Imperial as $7,610,018,000 on Nov. 30. The Royal Bank's assets were $7,538,996,000.

The struggle has been under way since formation of Canadian Imperial from a merger of the Canadian Bank of Commerce and Imperial Bank of Canada 6½ years ago.

A victory would have been rewarding to Canadian Imperial a month earlier, when the banks ended their financial year.

At that time Royal Bank assets were $7,779,659,000, Canadian Imperial assets $7,481,582,000, and the former still could tell its shareholders in year end financial statements it was No. 1.

The order of ranking for Canada's six other chartered banks was unchanged at Nov. 30.

Their assets:
Bank of Montreal $6,162,530,000; Bank of Nova Scotia $4,158,528,000; Toronto-Dominion Bank $3,518,512,000; Banque Canadienne Nationale $1,229,941,000; La Banque Provinciale du Canada $622,365,000; Mercantile Bank of Canada $203,004,000.

Mercantile reduced its assets by about $25,000,000 in 1967 to conform to a clause of the New Bank Act.

The bank is wholly-owned by First National City Bank of New York.

Northwest U.S. Needs Natural Gas

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Federal Power Commission indicated Friday it will move as speedily as it can to hear an emergency plan for getting more natural gas into the Pacific Northwest this winter.

El Paso Natural Gas Co. of El Paso, Tex., has applied to "borrow" Canadian gas imported via Pacific Gas Transmission Co., a subsidiary of the Pacific Gas and Electric Co. of San Francisco. It would make repayment later from its own reserves.

The case has implications for the Canada-U.S. gas trade, now somewhat clouded by recent actions of the regulatory boards in both countries.

ONE BARRIER

Ironically, a plan by El Paso to import more western Canada gas from Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. of Vancouver is one barrier, with the price to be charged the point of dissent.

El Paso wants an additional 75,000,000 cubic feet daily from Pacific Gas up to May 1. Then it would return the gas at a ratio of 3 to 2—or 150 per cent of what it takes from Pacific Gas between May 1 and Nov. 1.

One aspect is the recent reservation sounded by the National Energy Board of Canada in rejecting the Westcoast export price laid down by the power commission.

The board warned against undue siphoning off to other areas of Canadian exports authorized for specific U.S. markets.

Cunard Liner Will Become Floating Hotel

LONDON (AP) — The 34,172-ton Cunard liner Caronia, Britain's fifth-largest passenger ship, is being sold for more than $1,000,000 ($2,570,000) to Yugoslavia for use as a floating hotel.

Negotiations for the deal are expected to be concluded soon, a Cunard spokesman said.

The liner is expected to become a floating hotel off Dubrovnik to help Yugoslavia's growing tourist industry.

The 20-year-old luxury liner was designed to carry 863 passengers on cruises and the North Atlantic run.

The hope of every old-fashioned university administration is that the Berkeley bogey will stay far from its halls. But because of the arrival on all campuses of some startlingly new-fashioned students, I expect that the Berkeley incident will prove to have been merely the preliminary rumblings of an academic revolution.

As one who dislikes controversy and loud dissent, I hope it will proceed quietly. This is unlikely, however, since practically everything that youth undertakes is accompanied by a hellish amount of noise. In any case, it is now under way, and will continue until the dehumanized automat approach to education that provoked the California revolt has been replaced by something better.

Gains are going to be much more slowly achieved than the ardent advocates of change anticipate. But eventually, what I see as the university of the future will begin to emerge.

It will be neither a diploma mill nor a job-training school, and from it will come men and women competent to deal with a future that scares the hell out of me.

They will be involved, committed people, and I suspect they may not only save the world but make it a better abode.

You may have one of these new-fashioned students in your home. If so, I don't know whether to congratulate you or pity you, because they are a far remove from the uncomplicated Joe College of the past.

They call themselves activists, a term of Leftist flavor. Yet, in my experience of them, they scorn the regimentation of the Left.

Since they disown most of the traditions and comforting beliefs which our static culture has handed down to them, they are by no means easy to live with; in fact only their parents and other activists could possibly love them.

Their number is comparatively small — one estimate, which is almost certainly overgenerous, sets it at about 20 per cent of the university student body. But because they are ardent and angry and appallingly vocal, it is from the activists that our universities are beginning to take their tone.

I don't pretend to understand them, and am not sure that I even like them very much. Their idealist-ideoclast view tends to bewilder a man of my generation. But I admire them in a puzzled sort of way, and approve their passion for change in a world that could use it.

As students, they are not content to regard their universities as extensions of the high schools.

They think that student representatives should have a place in administration.

They are eager to be rid of the examination system and to trade the set-piece lecture for the seminar at which the instructor is guide and catalyst, his function less to impart knowledge than to put minds to work.

I am afraid that, if they get their way, education is likely to take on some new dimensions.

It is natural that these formidable young boat-rockers and would-be disturbers of the status quo should be at their strongest in Canada's university press.

This pleases and also scandalizes me, since their language tends to be ungirded, and they frequently write as if haranguing from a soap box.

It is not my aim to romanticize these challengers of placidity, and I know that life's necessities will cool many of them. But not, I trust, until they have established a beachhead for the next wave of disillusioned protesters against education as it is and the world as they find it.

Continuing Blood Clinics May End Periodic Crises

By PETE LOUDON
Should blood donor clinics be set up in Victoria on a continuous basis?

Should hospitals establish blood collection centres to backstop Red Cross clinics? Is the day approaching when once again cash payments must be offered to donors? These and similar questions will be discussed here soon by medical authorities representing both city hospitals and the B.C. section of the Canadian Red Cross.

The talks were planned following an emergency situation which developed both here and in Vancouver during the Christmas-New Year holiday.

A blood shortage threatened

postponement of vital operations here. The crisis was averted when 423 Victorians flocked to a clinic placed on emergency footing Thursday night.

Friday, servicemen at Canadian Forces Base Esquimalt further bolstered the diminishing supplies with a 318-pint donation.

(Service personnel consistently give blood beyond all proportion to their numbers in the community and have been largely responsible for avoiding many blood shortages in the past.)

Dr. K. R. Thornton, Royal Jubilee Hospital pathologist, Dr. Garth Walters of St. Joseph's Hospital and Dr. Terry Stout, medical director for the provincial blood bank at Vancouver, will meet to study measures aimed at placing blood donations on a more regular basis.

"We will explore ways of encouraging more donors and consider whether there is a need for wider facilities (for blood collection)," Dr. Thornton said.

Dr. Thornton said the discussions are in no way a criticism of past and present collection activities by the city and district branch of the Red Cross.

"But we must find some way to get more people to give more blood more regularly."

He pointed out that the need for blood in modern medicine has accelerated beyond the rate of population growth because of new surgical techniques and new treatments such as the artificial kidney units.

Last year Victoria hospitals drew 2,000 more pints of blood from the central bank than were supplied by local donors.

And while Victorians react quickly to emergencies, there is danger that recurring emergencies will mean a decline in public response.

One of the problems of collection in this area is that although volunteers give a great deal of time to clinic duties, most of the technical personnel come here for clinic days from Vancouver. This means clinics could only be held for two or three days each month.

The doctors are loath to make the proposal, but in some overseas areas hospitals regularly collect blood and often ask friends of patients to restore blood used in his care.

Another possible field for study is the removal of the clinic to some area where there is adequate parking and where greater numbers of donors could be processed.

'Prudent Stewardship' In Handling of Estate

Recent payment of a $200,000 executor's fee by Victoria city council was made against the advice of city solicitor T. P. O'Grady.

But the action was defended today against criticisms published elsewhere.

The story, told by a source close to the matter, is this:

On Dec. 5 the city of Victoria received a cheque for $2 million from Canada Trust Company. The sum represented the bulk of the city's legacy from the estate of the late Thomas Shanks McPherson.

The city was also presented with a bill for $200,000 for Canada Trust's administration of the estate over a five-year period.

City solicitor T. P. O'Grady

advised council to delay payment of the executor's bill. He said he had no doubts—the account was accurate and audited. But he felt the amount might be deemed too high by a court decision.

Mr. O'Grady said the charge might not be in accord with the law governing the administration of estates. He thought the trust company should submit it for approval by counsel and until this was done the city should withhold payment.

Mayor Hugh Stephen absented himself from the discussion by council because he had served on the board which advised on the estate's administration, prior to assuming office as mayor. The balance of council voted to pay the account without question.

The anonymous source who related the story today said this circumstance has caused some criticism of council and the trust company, which he felt to be unwarranted.

FEE AUTHORIZED

He pointed out, and Mr. O'Grady also touched on this in his remarks to council, that the fee named by Canada Trust was laid down by the late Mr. McPherson.

He said in a memorandum that it should be 2% per cent of the capital realized and five per cent of income receipts.

Mr. O'Grady had told council this was not necessarily binding on the city however. He cited the case of a similar bequest to an Ontario city where the courts had reduced the fee from $375,000 to $149,000.

Victoria City Council however was in receipt of a further memorandum from Mr. McPherson stating that he wanted no controversy in connection with his planned disposal of his estate, or the fee.

And council also took into consideration that any legal action to challenge the fee might cost as much as $15,000—and the action still be lost.

The aldermen also reportedly took into consideration that the fee laid down by Mr. McPherson was payment for not just administering the estate but for subsequent investments which increased the city's original legacy from $1 million to what will eventually total about $2.7 million.

"It was a prudent stewardship over a period of five years," Mr. O'Grady said this himself, said the informant.

The trust company also acted on behalf of 16 other beneficiaries, including the University of Victoria. None of them to date have questioned the rate at which the executor's fee was set.

It was also pointed out that the fee, when spread over the period of the administration, amounted to about five per cent per year—a rate acceptable or less than is normally charged for administration of other business interests.

Market Board To Force Hike In Egg Price

A 10 per cent increase in the price of eggs is expected this year.

A spokesman for producers said today the newly created B.C. egg marketing board, will seek to prevent overproduction which resulted last year in losses to the industry.

Egg surpluses caused prices to drop below the cost of production.

The board, the first of its kind in Canada, was established under the Natural Product (B.C.) Marketing Act. Its main purpose will be to adjust production to market requirements.

The act gives the board wide powers, such as authority to issue market quotas and to fix prices to be paid to producers.

Egg production will be controlled by seeing that not too many chicks are raised this spring.

Theme of the conference will be Stress, Strategy and Structure for Mission. The conference is for clergy and laymen.

Shift Systems Or Year Round?

Freeze to Force Trustee Decision

By DON VIPOND
Education Reporter

The Greater Victoria school system and its 30,000 pupils are at the brink of a classroom shortage which could mean shifts or year-round terms beginning next September.

School board chairman Peter Bunn said today the district is almost at "the point of no return" for building needed accommodation by the fall.

Under the provincial government's current freeze on all but "essential" classroom construction, over $3,000,000 worth of building plans are stalled at the department of education.

"We've got to get release on quite a lot of stuff almost immediately," said Mr. Bunn. "If we don't, it's inevitable that shifts will become a reality in September."

Another gang comes in. It's just not desirable."

On the possibility of other measures, including schools open year-round, Mr. Bunn said he believed it was the obligation of the school board to assess every avenue, including this one.

Time has all but run out, he said. It takes a month to complete the tendering functions and another month to clear up other administrative needs.

"That only leaves seven months for building. Some of our projects couldn't be done in that time. Some could."

FOR YESTERDAY
The district's school construction program is not a plan for tomorrow but for yesterday, he said.

"The logical way is to build for expansion, for tomorrow."

No business could operate the way the government is forcing the educational system to go, he claimed.

Mr. Bunn said he agreed completely with the views of Campbell River school board chairman Bruce Saunders who said recently his district faces a "bleak" 15 months in education.

"Because of the present freeze by the provincial government on building programs in the school districts we are going to have to look seriously at the semester system, school on a 12-month basis and teacher aides," said Mr. Saunders following election to his third term as chairman.

"We must do this if we want to maintain our present teacher-pupil ratio. I don't know how we are going to do it but if any school district in the country can do it, we can."

Ask The Times

Q. I would like to join the Consumer's Association of Canada; could you give me their address and the fee required. F.M.G.

A. The association's address is 100 Gloucester St., Ottawa 4, Ontario and the fee is $3. This entitles you to a year's subscription to the Canadian Consumer magazine, according to local publicity director for the association, Mrs. V. F. Ball.

Q. Could you tell me please if they accept women in the armed services in the United States and if so, to whom would I have to write.

A. Yes, they do. For the U.S. Army write the Armed Forces Examining and Induction Station, 1519 Alaskan Way South, Seattle. For the Air Force, write the USAF Recruiting Centre, 6405 Roosevelt Way NE in Seattle. And for the Navy, write their recruiting centre at 2223-2nd St., Seattle.

Rookie Leads Habs to Win

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Canadiens, heartened by the two-goal output of rookie centre Jacques Lemaire, grabbed a piece of fifth place in the National Hockey League's eastern division by downing New York Rangers 5-2 this afternoon.

Snow Aids Crash Landing

MINOT, N.D. (AP)—The pilot of a light aircraft with jammed landing gear brought the plane in safely on its belly at Minot International Airport today. Plows pushed snow onto the runway to cushion the impact while firemen, rescue crews and an ambulance stood by.

Captain's Gamble Pays Off

ROBE, Australia (Reuters)—A last-ditch attempt by a captain to save his burning ship appeared to be paying off tonight when the vessel was taken in tow.
Capt. M. Lausund, 32 crew members and eight passengers had abandoned the 6,410-ton Norwegian freighter Tonar as flames roared below decks. The ship was left drifting near here, 165 miles southeast of Adelaide.

Two Nuns Gunned Down

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Two Roman Catholic nuns were shot down by a sniper this afternoon in an alleyway beside the St. Francis of Assisi Church on the city's near north side.

One was wounded seriously in the chest and the other shot in the shoulder.

Police took a 21-year-old woman into custody for questioning. They said she was a former mental patient. Police said they did not know the motive for the shooting.

Pakistan Arrests 28 in 'Plot'

KARACHI (Reuters)—The Pakistan government announced today it has arrested 28 persons, including junior officers alleged to have planned to bring about a secession of East Pakistan.

To discuss plans, some of them visited Agartala, which is in India, 50 miles east of Dacca, the capital of East Pakistan, the announcement said.

Officer, Bandit Hit in Shootout

VANCOUVER (CP)—A young bandit lay semi-conscious in Vancouver General Hospital today, a few yards away from a police constable who was gunned down in a dramatic shootout Friday.

Police said they expected to charge the 26-year-old gunman with attempted murder of Constable Stanley Blackstock, 27, and robbery of the Vancouver City Savings and Credit Union.

Hospital officials described both men as being in fair condition.

Traffic Patrolman Blackstock received a bullet wound to the chest. The gunman was shot four times.

Hospital officials said Blackstock was in surgery for two hours while doctors located and removed a bullet from his right lung.

Doctors performed a tracheotomy on the gunman so he could breathe while he was receiving emergency treatment. A medical team spent five hours with him in the operating room during which time they found four bullet wounds but no bullets. Surgeons repaired a severed artery in the bandit's right shoulder and wired his jaw, which also was hit. Other wounds were to the right thigh and right hand.

An armed man entered the credit union Friday afternoon and demanded money while he held a shiny revolver at a customer, three Credit Union employees and a private detective.

"That's right, it's the second time in two months," the armed man told Detective Dick Best, hired by the company after two previous holdups.

The gunman got $1,675 in small bills, then fled, with Detective Best and another credit union employee in pursuit.

Driving his car, Best overtook the bandit, who was on foot. Best was forced to give up the chase when the gunman began shooting. The man left in an old-model car.

Const. Blackstock, who happened to be patrolling the area, followed the bandit's car and cornered it at a dead-end street.

SURGING CROWD

Wide Tribute To Heart Donor

(See also Page 3)

CAPE TOWN (UPI)—The biggest funeral crowd in Cape Town history, a racially mixed throng of 6,000 including many whites paid an emotional tribute today to the mulatto factory worker who gave his heart to a white dentist might live.

The surging crowd, so big police used dogs at one point to restore order, cheered and applauded as Dr. Christian Barnard arrived in 90-degree summertime heat at the funeral of 24-year-old Clive Haupt.

Women, some weeping, pushed forward to touch the pioneering surgeon. He appeared embarrassed.

Thousands of Cape Town's colored (mixed blood) population, en route to annual Mardi Gras-style carnival celebrations paused for a minute of silent tribute to Haupt, who died of a stroke at a beach a few hours before the transplant operation.

Groups of people stood silently along the three-mile route from the church to segregated Woltemade Cemetery where Haupt was buried.

More than 2,000 persons gathered at the graveside and for a time hampered pallbearers from bringing the body for burial.

A minister called for volunteers to carry the casket and Mayor Gerald Ferry stepped forward with friends of Haupt. The largely colored crowd murmured approval.

Dr. Barnard, Mayor Ferry and members of Haupt's family tossed rose petals on the coffin as it was lowered into the grave.

Haupt's widow, Dorothy, broke down, sobbing, "Clive! Clive!"

The crowd was so dense it backed up traffic for a mile in every direction and police finally brought in dogs. No one was hurt but screams swept the crowd as people fled the dogs.

BLAIBERG 'CHEERFUL'

Negro Man Next?

CAPE TOWN (AP)—Dr. Philip Blaiberg was reported in satisfactory condition and cheerful today after his heart-transplant operation.

On the fifth day with his new heart, the 58-year-old dentist is "enjoying life better now than before the operation," Dr. Christian N. Barnard said. "Even if he only lives for days, he's had that."

"We've given him something."

The head of the South African operating team said he now wants to do a heart transplant on a Negro.

Barnard told a press conference he now wants to perform an operation on a colored man suffering from a disease that affects only the heart and leaves the rest of the body free of complications usually found in whites. Blacks are segregated in white-ruled South Africa.

This progressive disease, cardiac myopathy, is mostly found in Negroes and is responsible for a high percentage of their heart fatalities, he said.

Successful Surgery On Siamese Twins

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters)—Surgeons at the Transvaal Memorial Hospital for Children in this South African city today successfully separated Siamese twins joined at the head, a hospital spokesman announced.

The white twins, Catherine and Shirley O'Hare, were born in October by caesarian delivery.

The hospital superintendent said the twins were in satisfactory condition, but still on the danger list.

The operation, performed by a 27-man surgical team, lasted five hours.

"The twins stood the surgical procedure well," the statement said.

Two Killed In Road Crash

BURNABY (CP)—Two teenagers were killed and five other persons sent to hospital in a two-car collision in North Burnaby today.

Dead are Earl Gordon Harvey, 18, and Joseph Vales Telic, 17, both of Burnaby.

The victims were in a car that carried four other young people, including two 14-year-old girls. The other four were not critically injured.

The driver of the second car also was taken to hospital.

Groups of people stood silently along the three-mile route from the church to segregated Woltemade Cemetery where Haupt was buried.

More than 2,000 persons gathered at the graveside and for a time hampered pallbearers from bringing the body for burial.

Vatican Envoy Contacts Hanoi

(Times News Services)

A Vatican envoy has had direct contact with a representative of North Vietnam about a peace appeal by Pope Paul, says the Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano.

It is believed to be the first time the Vatican disclosed a direct diplomatic contact with a North Vietnamese representative.

The councillor of the papal nunciature in Paris, Msgr. Antonio Innocenti, personally handed to the North Vietnamese representative there, Mai Van Bo, the text of the Pope's appeal of Dec. 15 for a worldwide Day of Peace Jan. 1.

It does not say whether the meeting took place before or after Pope Paul's offer Dec. 22 to mediate in the Vietnam dispute and his meeting with President Johnson Dec. 23.

Meanwhile South Vietnam's President Nguyen Van Thieu said today "everyone is waiting for a . . . much clearer position from Hanoi."

But he added that the bombing of North Vietnam could not be stopped without reciprocal action from Hanoi.

Thieu also told a reporter who questioned him that his government welcomes "any movement or any informal talks from any government to bring peace for Vietnam." But he added: "I believe negotiations should be the main task between the Saigon government and the Hanoi government."

Death Row Hunger Strike

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP)

Nearly half the condemned men on San Quentin prison's death row went on a hunger strike Friday, protesting the food and water.

Associate Warden James W. D. Park said 25 of the 63 men started the strike at breakfast and then turned down their last meal of the day, served at 2 p.m.

However, they won one of their points. Parks said the convict waiters wore clean aprons serving the afternoon meal.

Park said the meals sent to death row travel a long way from the prison kitchen and efforts will be made to keep the food warmer.

The same food is served all prisoners except those on death row are given more milk, meat and eggs, he said.

Statements Studied By Martin

OTTAWA (CP)—The director of Canada's medical aid program in Vietnam may be asked for an official report on his allegations that the U.S. has used lethal gas in the war.

A spokesman in the external affairs department said today the statements by Dr. Alje Vennema, 35, contained in a letter to a Montana professor of zoology, will be studied by External Affairs Minister Martin.

Although Dr. Vennema had not made the allegations in his official capacity, Mr. Martin would have to decide whether they concern the position of the Canadian government, the spokesman said.

Dr. Vennema is a Dutch-born physician who lived in Burlington, Ont., before he went to Indochina independently three years ago. Later he took over a tuberculosis out-patient clinic 350 miles north of Saigon in Vietnam and began receiving supplies and other support from the Canadian external aid office.

Last summer he was named to head the Canadian medical effort in South Vietnam.

Dr. Vennema wrote Dr. E. W. Pfeiffer of the University of Montana that some Vietnamese civilians have died from the effects of gas being used by U.S. troops.

The letter is quoted as saying "some of the gases used in the field not only can cripple and kill but actually have done so." The mortality rate is stated as 90 per cent among children and 10 per cent among adults stricken by the gas.

The U.S. defence department has denied the allegations.

Science reporter William Hines reported the letter in the Washington Star without identifying Dr. Vennema. The Montana professor later identified Dr. Vennema as the doctor who wrote him.

The external affairs spokesman here said Dr. Vennema has been under no obligation to report—and has not in fact reported—medical findings to the Canadian government during his three years in the country.

FAMED DOCTOR INDICTED FOR ANTI-DRAFT EFFORTS

'No Qualms About Going to Jail'

BOSTON (AP)—Dr. Benjamin Spock, Yale university chairman, said at a press conference in his New York City apartment after a federal grand jury returned the U.S. policy in Vietnam, have been indicted on charges of conspiring to counsel young men to avoid the U.S. military draft.

"I have no qualms about going to jail," Spock, the 64-year-old author of numerous books on baby care, said at a press conference in his New York City apartment after a federal grand jury returned the U.S. policy in Vietnam, have been indicted on charges of conspiring to counsel young men to avoid the U.S. military draft.

"I have no qualms about going to jail," Spock, the 64-year-old author of numerous books on baby care, said at a press conference in his New York City apartment after a federal grand jury returned the U.S. policy in Vietnam, have been indicted on charges of conspiring to counsel young men to avoid the U.S. military draft.

Also indicted with Spock and the New Haven, Conn., chaplain were Marcus Raskin, 33, of Washington, D.C., co-director of the Institute for Policy Studies; Mitchell Goodman, 44, an author from New York City, and Michael Ferber, 23, of Boston, a graduate student at Harvard University.

Raskin was a White House aide for a time in the Kennedy administration in the office of McGeorge Bundy, special assistant to the president for national security affairs.

DR. SPOCK
... questioned by FBI

The FBI said the five would be ordered to appear in federal court at Boston for arraignment. That date has not been set.

Conviction of conspiracy to violate the Selective Service Act carries a maximum penalty up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Li-Gen Lewis B. Hershey, director of the selective service system, said he takes "no pleasure in seeing anybody get indicted," but said the action, initiated by the justice department, was necessary because "if they are not guilty they ought to get a chance to show it and if they are, they ought to be punished."

The indictments listed 11 overt acts as a basis for the charges allegedly having taken place during four events. Coffin, Spock, Raskin and

ROUGH GREETING was experienced by U.S. vice-president Hubert Humphrey on visit today at palace of Ethiopian Emperor Haile Selassie in Addis Ababa. Cheetah bared its fangs and snarled when Humphrey attempted to pet it. University students hanged President Johnson in effigy and chanted anti-American slogans while waiting in vain for the U.S. leader to address them. Humphrey cancelled the visit when his meeting with Selassie took longer than expected. (AP Wirephoto)

Honors to Newsmen Criticized by Times

By JOHN LeBLANC

LONDON—(CP)—Award of honors to a few journalists in the Queen's New Year list has generated a stern admonition from The Times but apparently little concern elsewhere.

The Times takes the view that, while honors are all right for newspaper owners, they could be dangled as bait by politicians trying to seduce lesser personae. Traditionally, they are recommended to the monarch by the prime minister.

In an editorial the newspaper finds what it calls a "disturbing precedent" in the fact that this year's honors list, as distributed for publication, contains a category for "publishing and journalism" and one for broadcasting. An aide at 10 Downing Street said that as a convenience for reporters handling the story, the mimeographed list given the press has been divided by occupational classifications since 1962. The official printed list in the Royal Gazette is not so arranged.

BERRY HONORED

The chief press award this year was a peerage to Michael Berry, chairman and editor of the Conservative morning Telegraph. There were a couple of MBEs to writers in the provincial press and none to staffers on national newspapers.

"While all the actual awards this year are no doubt innocent enough," The Times says, "the principle of a government bestowing honors on journalists in an habitual way is highly objectionable. . . . If it becomes accepted as a normal thing for journalists to take honors which are in a prime minister's gift, this will, inevitably lead to attempts to manage newspapers by offering the prospect of ribbons and titles to their staff."

The Times urges that "ordinary working journalists" should refuse honors that could have any bearing on their work, and it notes it has had a tradition that staff members do not accept honors.

WELCOMES PEERAGE

However, it welcomes the announcement of a peerage to Berry, head of its morning and Sunday competitor.

The Times itself is in the portfolio of the Thomson organization headed by Canadian-born Lord Thomson, who received the title before he acquired the paper. The other Canadian newspaper peer here was the late Lord Beaverbrook, who got his title for political rather than journalistic reasons. His son, Max Aitken, who now heads the Beaverbrook group, has not assumed the hereditary title.

Dermot Morrah, a Times alumnus who now is chairman of the Commonwealth Press Union's press freedom committee, wrote a letter to The Times following its editorial in which he told of a former editor carrying the no-honors tradition to the grave.

Morrah said the former editor, G. E. Buckle, had just completed editing the letters of Queen Victoria in 1932 and had received an offer of a baronetcy from a grateful King George V. This was 20 years after Buckle's retirement.

"That's nice of the King," Buckle said. "Of course, I shall reply humbly begging leave to decline the honor; but I shall ask if he will give me a signed photograph of himself instead."

"You see, I mustn't compromise the Great Paper," Columnist "Peterborough" in the Daily Telegraph tells a different kind of story in the case of Alan Robbins, who received the CBE in 1954 soon after retiring as Times news editor.

Peterborough says Robbins got a rap on the knuckles from the then editor, Sir William Haley (who got his own knighthood, before joining The Times), but proprietor Lord Astor of Hever wrote him "heartiest congratulations."

Mental Health Group Likes 'Future Plans'

A five-member delegation from the B.C. section of the Canadian Mental Health Association met Health Minister Wesley Black Friday and came away assured.

"We're assured the government is aware of the problems in mental health," delegation spokesman Dr. George Kenwood of Vancouver said.

The delegation presented a brief compiled in February, 1967. The brief was to have been presented to Mr. Black last spring but the CMHA's annual meeting with the minister was postponed due to the minister's illness.

The brief called for provision of adequate funds "to ensure proper functioning of training centres at appropriate B.C. universities."

It sought increased and decentralized facilities for "the prevention and treatment of mental and emotional disorder in children." It asked appointment of "a children's ombudsman with senior government rank."

Dr. Kenwood, B.C. CMHA executive director, said the meeting left the delegation "satisfied with the statements made by the government departments that they're doing this, planning that . . ."

"Of course their final announcements will be made to the legislature," he said. Members of the delegation said that since Mr. Black has undertaken a reorganization of the mental health services branch, the brief, almost a year old is somewhat dated.
